wet eyelids, when the boy had gone away. "Don't try, honey," that good woman returned, bending to kiss Tess' rosy mouth. Then she drove away, sung and smiling at her husband's elbow, leaving Betty to receive yet other material tokens of the day of peace and good will. They came from every hand - fat socks of meal and flour, apples, potatoes, preserves, homemade wine, flake crusted pies and sugary crisp sweet cakes.

Some way the superabundance wounded Betty, albeit, she knew it was but some slight exaggeration of the friendly neighborhood custom. She was, in fact, a trifle morbid. She would have received as graciously and gracefully as any might but for thinking that the giving had the spur of her supposed necessity.

"There is nobody else to send anything. We can rest a little while," Trub said after supper, but even as he spoke there came a thundering knock at the front door. Nobody was there when it opened, but they heard wheels rolling away.

"Bah! Blind gooses! Don't you see the box? There! At your feet," Marian cried, darting past Trub and Pete to snatch a square wooden something from the floor in front of her brothers. When she had wrenched it open, there lay, amid wrappings of pink and silver paper, all manner of Christmas cakes and Christmas toys, fireworks galore, and at the very bottom a sorrowfully slip.

"Tommy Adkin wishes his friends Trub and Pete and Patty and Marian and Tess a very happy Christmas."

"And I am left out entirely, though Tommy used to claim me for his sweet heart when he wore dresses," Betty said, laughing to save herself from crying. Marian kicked the box contemptuously, saying:

"We must be getting popular when Mr. Storekeeper Adkin thinks it worth while to be good to us."

"Marian, Marian," Betty said. "What a speech, and Christmas too! I am afraid I must make you write and thank Tommy, and remember, dears, Christmas means above everything peace on earth and good will to men."

"If Christmas makes folks good, why don't they let pappy come home?" Tess asked with round, wet eyes. Patty was staring hard in the fire. Without stirring she said over her shoulder: "I believe he will come, and Lightfoot too. There is a road in the fire - a long one - and a man and a horse coming along."

Betty slept dreamlessly that night, but all the next day she was the prey of nameless terrors. Her mind went back constantly to the beginning of the trouble. It seemed to her it had truly begun when Johnny Gates, the richest, idliest, most dissolute youngster in the county, came courting her and was sent about his business. Yet he it was who had brought her word of her father's arrest and in the same breath had begged her to marry him. When she gave him a frantic refusal, he looked at her, his face growing hard and white, his eyes burning, to say: "Whatever your father suffers, Betty, it will lie at your door. You might save him, and you let him be disgraced, and all because you fancy Ned Westfield loves you. Maybe he does, but I can tell you he will not marry you. His father would sooner see him dead."

She had turned from him in silent scorn, but how his darting glance. It was the smart of it, with a later taint that the Westfields fought cases for either love or money, that had impelled her to sell Lightfoot and pay a colossal fee. Yet only three weeks back Johnny had come, humbly entreating her to let him take her burdens and promising vaguely great things for her father.

One little minute Betty filtered; then her heart held her in the right way. She shook her head and left him, and when he ran after her he never named marriage to her again. He went away, crying and cursing. She had not seen him since and was devoutly grateful for the fact.

As it drew on toward sunset Betty strolled out to the orchard. Her mother's grave was there - beside it she might dream a little of last year - and the creamy, heavy hearted roses some one had sent her upon Christmas eve. She had laid them upon the green mound, though knowing well their source. Ned's first gift, they were sacred and belonged by right to her holy place. Snow fell and covered them. They were beautiful for weeks. Now as she looked at the flowerless swell a great sob rose in her throat. She knelt and prayed wordlessly with her face upon the earth.

The children were in the back yard full of joy in what their Christmas money had bought. The boys had yearling steers, Patty some beehives, Tess a

"That's a Christmas tree right," Marian said decisively. Tess stooped to scratch the head of her least pig as she answered reflectively. "I like Sarah Elizabeth if she can't get her babies can't go on a tree."

"Oh, say, wouldn't Logan an bright look fine, hangin' up in a cedar bush?" Pete said in gasps, laughing as he had not done for weeks. Marian nodded.

"An put on Patty's bees, too, an then send for Tommy Adkin to distribute the presents. My, but I'd like to see him. Both his eyes would be shut a week."

Betty, coming back to them, opened her lips for gentle reproach, but before she spoke it they caught her in tumultuous arms.

"Come in to the fire, sister. I most thought you was lost," Tess declared, nestling close to her.

"Yes, do come. I put an egg to roast for you," Marian said, catching the other hand fast, while Trub said discontentedly: "I wish it would get good an dark. My firecrackers are just achin to go off."

Patty was already indoors. They found her again staring at the fire. Marian pulled her braided hair. Trub slipped a chestnut against her cheek; still she did not rouse from her rapt contemplation until Betty bent and said softly, "What is it, Patty, dear?"

"It's all crumbled down," Patty said with a little impatient sigh. "But the

"PAPPY! PAPPY! PAPPY HAS COME HOME!" same road was in the fire - the same man an horse - an it worries me that I can't find out if they are coming here."

"We'll know when they get here," Trub began. A hail outside got him short. Ring the watchdog, gave a long, joyous howl that sent all pallmell to the door. Through the dusk they could make out moving figures at the gate. It swung in, some one darted through and caught Betty and Tess in the clasp of trembling arms, while the other children shouted wildly: "Pappy! Pappy! Pappy has come home!"

As he loosed Betty Ned Westfield caught her hand. He meant only to give her friendly greeting, but Uncle Billy Trotter behind him rung out, "If ye don't kiss her right here an now, Ned, I'll never vote her lecturer for you - never in the world."

So Ned kissed her handsomely in the face of them all. His father at his back said with a beaming smile: "So you thought, Betty, I did not want you for a daughter."

Tess, high in her father's arms, broke in gravely, "Betty is our daughter, an nobody else can't have her, but if you come in we have got a heap of Christmas, an you may have some for bringin' pappy home."

"They may have it all for bringin' Lightfoot," Trub said as he elung fast to the neck of his recovered treasure. Betty turned to Ned.

"Tell me, am I awake?" she asked. "I have dreamed so often. Tell me, too, when you began to work miracles."

"It ain't nothin' short o' a miracle - anybody gittin' that pore, lyn Tood Barley ter speak the truth," Uncle Billy said, taking Tess from her father's clasp. As Mr. Walton met Betty's inquiring gaze he smiled and said:

"You will have to let Ned tell you, dear. All I know is that this morning a pardon was read to me. I was told my friends waited outside, and there I found Ned, Tobe Fellow and Uncle Billy, and all bent on bringing me home with a hmnah."

Then Ned told briefly yet clearly how Barley had plotted with Johnny Gates and a reckless stranger whom they later spirited away against the good name of Betty's father; how Barley had personated Mr. Walton in carrying off the other horse, and afterward put the beast the stranger had got in the trade back where it had been first stabled by its owner. Then poor Tood, as the agent of the Christmas conspirators, had seen and heard what had sent him straight to Ned Westfield and confession.

"Of course I let him go free," Ned wound up. "He is safe in Texas now, but his name is not Barley, and we will wish him luck. All the rest was ridiculously easy. Fortunately I know the governor well enough to tell him outright when I am in a hurry for anything."

"But Ned ain't told you yet, Betty, how he took an dashed off like a streak o' lightning ter the Ederney, found that t'other feller an got his affidavit," Uncle Billy said with a fresh and more vigorous chuckle. Betty gave him a heavenly smile, then put her arms again about her father's neck, saying:

"So long as we have him home free and sound and safe it does not matter in the least how it came about."

"Yes, it does," Marian said, clinching her fists hard. Then through a rain of tears: "I-I can't hate anybody, not even Johnny Gates, like I want to. I am so glad to see pappy again, the hate all slips away."

"But love and peace abide forever," Ned whispered in Betty's ear, and Trub said slowly as they all went inside:

"There never was in the world smother another happy Christmas."

Celebration of Christmas. The celebration of Christmas is said by the church historians to have been formally instituted by Pope Telephorus, who died A. D. 138.

POSTMASTER GENERAL.

Second Annual Report Issued by William L. Wilson.

ABUSE OF THE POSTAL SERVICE.

Postmaster General Utters a Vigorous Protest Against Free Transportation of Certain Matter - Plans to Make the Postoffice Self-Sustaining.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9. - A vigorous protest against the abuse of the postal service is made in the annual report of Postmaster General Wilson. He quotes figures which show an excess of expenditures over receipts of $5,197,088 for the past fiscal year, which, however, is a decrease in deficiency as compared with the previous fiscal year of $1,679,966.

This satisfactory exhibit for the past year has been made possible, the postmaster general says, by a vigorous policy of bringing suit or pushing collection on bonds immediately after default, which is the only safe practice for the interests of the government and those of the obligors. The postmaster general says that he thinks congress may properly grant relief in cases of hardship and injustice following collection after the lapse of years by a general bill or otherwise.

The report says: "Notwithstanding the gratifying increase in the earnings of the department, which would have been fully up to it in excess of my estimate for the fiscal year but for the halting of business activity in its closing months due to the uncertainties of the political campaign about to begin, the total deficiency, even after omitting the amount credited to the Pacific railroads, was $5,197,088.44, which was a charge on the general treasury. There is no necessity for this annual deficit. The department is powerless to prevent it but a few lines of amendment by congress to the postal laws will wipe it out and give in its place a steady surplus. It has its chief source in the transmutation of second class matter into first class by the increasing volume of matter never in the contemplation of the law, which gives the nominal rate of 1 cent a pound on such matter and assuredly outside of the policy of the law as to newspapers and periodicals."

The report recites the strenuous efforts of the post to secure legislation designed to protect the postal service from this waste of its credit and the tax payers from the large burden imposed on them by the regular deficit. But, it says, up to now, the combinations and active efforts of the beneficiaries of this abuse have parried all appeals of the department. The postmaster general says he would have taken the responsibility to modify and reverse the successful rulings through which this inroad on the service has been effected, and to exclude from the benefits of second class rates the social libelers and other publications not in the policy of the law, but for the hope of the enactment of what is known as the Loud bill now pending in the house.

This would have imposed upon those who profit at the public expense by existing practices the necessity of seeking, through the courts or otherwise, the restoration of their special privileges.

As to the increase in the weight of second class matter for the year was 37,000,000 pounds, as against 18,000,000 pounds last year.

The more cost of transportation of this matter is estimated at 8 cents per pound. The postage revenue received from it was 84 cents per pound. Thus, $49,000,000 pounds in round numbers, at 5 cents for transportation, cost $2,450,000; postal revenue received at 84 cents per pound, $2,992,400, a loss on transportation alone of nearly $550,000.

"But this does not cover the full loss to the government on second class matter. Setting off the cost of mail services on public and official matter, as above stated, by the use and rental of public buildings provided for the postoffice department, we have as the great weight of all non-governmental matter handled by the mails for the last fiscal year an aggregate of 519,977,838 pounds. The gross money expenditures of the department were, as already stated, $90,626,336.84 and including the earnings of the Pacific railroads, to wit, $1,538,593.69, an expenditure of $89,187,743.15 to handle this matter. It thus appears that from two-thirds of the matter handled the last fiscal year the revenue was less than one-third of the cost - mail service."

Postmaster General Wilson discusses the proposed 1-cent letter rate, the cheapest postage in the world. He said it would yield a great profit, but it is idle talk such reduction while two thirds of our mail matter handled at a small fraction of its cost, at the deficits of the department in consequence aggregated in 11 years (since the act of March 8, 1885) the enormous sum of $71,877,430.

The estimates for the current fiscal year and the year 1905 follow:

Estimated revenue for 1905, $90,000,000; expenditures estimated for 1905, $90,000,000; deficiency for 1905, $0.00. Total estimated revenue for 1906, $90,000,000; expenditures estimated for 1906, $90,000,000; deficiency for 1906, $0.00.

Amateur Bayard Declines. WASHINGTON, Dec. 7. - Information received from London states that Mr. Bayard has declined the gift proposed to be made to him in recognition of his efforts in the cause of peace and good will between the United States and England. In his declaration Mr. Bayard cordially thanks the London Daily Telegraph and those who supported the proposal, but says that his position as a peace advocate prevents his acceptance of any testimonial.

Deputy Harrington Arraigned. BUFFALO, Dec. 9. - Eugene W. Harrington, former deputy city comptroller, who is under a cloud pending the investigation of his care of the city's money, was formally arraigned in police court. The charge was that he had converted to his own use the sum of $1,370. Harrington pleaded not guilty and was held for the grand jury. His bail was fixed at $3,000.

Cornell Football Season Profitable. ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 8. - Cornell closes the football season with a balance of $3,000 above expenses. The Harvard game was well attended, but the expenses were large and ate up the profits. Cornell received $1,000 as her part of the receipts from the Pennsylvania game. The football balance goes into the general athletic treasury.

SIX-DAY CYCLE RACE.

Fast Work Done by Some of the Men. Other Spectators.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9. - The great throng which cheered the wheelmen in the 6-day international cycle race, now being held in Madison Square garden, was repaid for the weary day spent in watching a stiff wind and a noisy mist which fell.

When the band began playing the riding was most spirited. Teddy Hale, the young son of Kris, had just scored his 70th mile and Rice had 68 miles to his credit. Schock did some very fast riding.

Pierce, who had been sleeping between 5 and 7, came on looking refreshed and went to work in earnest. He soon jumped ahead of Elkes and it soon became apparent that he intended to sweep ahead of some of the favorites.

Little Taylor, the dapper, carried a grin that was amusing as he bent far over his handle bars. Hale rode steadily and did not appear to exert himself as did Rice, who had been slowly moving.

Toward 9 o'clock the 16 men in the great race made a great sprint, this one being in unison and strongly inspired by a lively waits which the band commenced to play. Following is the midnight score, all laps omitted:

Hale, 770 miles; Moore, 678; Reading, 701; Taylor, 685; Schock, 715; Ashinger, 685; Rice, 745; Pierce, 678; Forrester, 701; Elkes, 600; Smith, 685; Maddox, 618; Gannon, 580; Cassidy, 578; McLeod, 478; Gillick, 550.

SENATION AT AMSTERDAM.

Prominent Citizens' Odd Way of Expressing Florence Haun's Cause.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Dec. 9. - Raymond Christman, a prominent business man and trustee in the Baptist church, has created a great sensation in this city by erecting in his family lot in Greenhill cemetery a handsome and costly monument for Florence Haun. It is inscribed "Florence Viola Christman, devoted to the memory of a wronged child. Dead to the world but alive in Christ."

Mrs. Haun shot and killed her lover, Charles Laundry, in this city, in November, 1903, and is now serving a life sentence for the crime in Auburn prison. Christman has become known as the "woman's guardian." He has given her his name and is trying to secure a pardon for her. He claims she is dying with consumption and that she is the most beautiful woman he has ever known.

ALBANY, Dec. 9. - Governor Morton has reduced to 50 years, subject to commutation for good behavior, the sentence of William West, a life prisoner in Sing Sing, who was a convict in Sing Sing and in a quarrel killed one of his fellow convicts. It was at that time 19 years of age. West will be a free man in September, 1920, if he behaves.

Spaniards' Death a Report. HAVANA, Dec. 9. - The report published in the United States that Captain General Weyler had been wounded in a declared to be absolutely false.
