Henry I wore a beard trimmed round and Richard Cœur de Lion a short beard. Henry III shaved, but his son, Edward I, wore a curled beard.

John Scott, earl of Eldon (1761-1838), was popularly called the "stormy petrel of politics" because he was in the habit of hastening to London when any rumor of a dissolution of the cabinet came to him with the expectation of being summoned by the king to form a ministry.

HUMOR OF THE HOUR.

About a month ago a farmer near Chicago decided to move to town, so he went to the city and hunted up a real estate agent and offered to trade his farm for city lots. The agent was all business and was in for a trade at once.

"I want to show you," he said, "a block of the finest lots anywhere in Chicago. They're centrally located and cheap as sawdust. Get in my buggy, and I'll take you out to see them."

They drove out and looked at the lots, and the agent expatiated at great length on the advantages of their location and finally said:

"Now, when can I have a look at your farm?"

"I'll show it to you presently," said the farmer. "It's about ten miles back on the road between here and town."

Detroit Free Press.

A Proud Record.

"Who was that Squire Huxtable that died last week?" asked the caller at the newspaper office.

"He was a man," responded the editor of the Perkins Junction Palladium, "who had taken this paper 19 years, always paid for it in advance, never expected me to make a local item about it when he put a new roof on his barn or sold his pork, when he came in to ask me a question never began by saying, 'An editor is supposed to know everything,' always sent a $2 bill with the wedding notice whenever any of his family got married and never had an idea he could run my paper better than I could."

And the editor of The Palladium fervently tried to wipe away a tear with the office towel.—Chicago Tribune.

An Old Hand.

"I am very sorry, sir," said the poet, "but I am obliged to call your attention to the fact that a line in one of my recent compositions was entirely perverted and the meaning painfully distorted by the compositor."

"Young man," replied the editor, "that compositor has gone through more poems than you ever wrote or even read. He has put in his life getting up poetry of all kinds, spring and fall styles and heavier goods for winter. He may have changed your poem, but when you say he harmed it you presume. When a man of his experience makes up his mind to change a piece of poetry, a person in your position should remember the respect that is due to superior knowledge and not attempt to criticize."—Washington Star.

Adulteration.

"One of the great objections to whiskey," said the man of abstemious habits, "is the fact that in this era of adulteration it contains so many foreign substances."

"Young man," replied Colonel Stillwell, "you have just given utterance to one of the most impressive truths that I know of. Why, sub, last night I saw a man pouring watah into it!"—Exchange.

Hardships of Talent.

Boggs' Old Friend—Great heavens, man, do I find you reduced to playing a corset on the street corner to make a living?

Boggs—I ain't doing this to make a living. My wife won't let me practice in the house.—Tit-Bits.

Incomprehensible.

Bildad—What do you think of my wife?

Ichabod—I think she's a poem—yes, sir, a poem.

Bildad—Um! A magazine poem! I can't understand her.—Manchester News.

A Plausible Theory.

Mickey—Dem silk stockin' kids dean' dare ride down hill on deir stummicks like we do, do dey, Jake?

Jak—Aw, I duuno. Dey don't, but mobby it's 'cause appendicitis runs in deir families, 'n it ain't safe.—Truth.

It Worried Her.

Servant—Shure, murr, Rover's just after bitin' the lig off av' the butcher's by.

Mistress—Dear, dew, how dreadfully annoying! I do hope he was a clean boy, Mary!—Tit-Bits.

Insight.

"When two women quarrel, I can always tell which is to blame."

"How do you do it?"

"I know that the one who seems most amiable has been the aggressor."—Chicago Record.

Wonders.

"What makes you so quiet, Perry? Are you wondering what you will say to your wife when you get home?"

"No, I was wondering what she would say to me."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Looked That Way.

Mrs. Brown—Does Mrs. Dorcas belong to the sewing circle?

Brown—I think so. I've noticed that her husband fastens his suspenders with a string.—New York Sunday Journal.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Saved by an Owl.

Owls are by common consent adjudged to be birds of ill omen, but Engineer Ned Barnett of the Santa Fe says he happens to know that they are anything but that and tells the following story to prove his assertion.

About eight months ago, one morning as the east bound overland was pulling through the mountains west of Albuquerque, N. M., Barnett's engine doing the work, a big horn beaked owl dashed against the front window of the cab with such force as to break it, the bird itself dropping dead at the engineer's feet. Though Barnett is not, generally speaking, a superstitious man, this seemed so singular an occurrence that he stopped the train and sent a brakeman ahead to see if the way was clear. Strange to relate, the brakeman soon returned, reporting a landslide across the track in the mountain pass, about 100 yards ahead. Hands were sent at once to clear the track, and in removing the debris they found another owl, no doubt mate to the first, caught in the crotch of an uprooted tree and crushed to death in the fall.

Barnett had both owls stuffed, and the two now adorn his cab, always insuring him good luck, he says.—Philadelphia Times.

The Old Time Fire.

Talk 'rround yer buildin's That's all but up by steam. Give me the old oak fire. What the old folks useter dream.

Morris and the Sailor. Nothing pleased the late William Morris, the poet, so much as to be mistaken for a sailor. Once, while rolling through one of the river-side streets of old London, he was overhauled by a sea-faring man. "Avast there!" cried the stranger. "Don't I know you? Weren't you once the mate of the brig 'Sea Swallow'?" To be mistaken for the mate of a ship bearing so poetic a name as the Sea Swallow was simply glorious. "Yes, I'm he," said Morris, and he looked arms with the stranger, piloted him into an alchouse and filled him full of liquors and substantiala.

FATHER KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC. Illustration of a man's head and shoulders.

Worth Gold. ROCHANTON, Pa., Aug. 1898. Headache troubled me for 35 years, the physician called it neuritis and said it was incurable; it became so severe that I had to lay in bed every week two days, but after I took only a few bottles of Koenig's Nerve Tonic I felt better, and after taking six bottles more I am entirely well; therefore recommend the Tonic to all such sufferers. F. Schmitt writes from Ottowa, N. D., July, '98, that he took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic for rheumatic pains, which he had for two years. It cured him.

Since I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic I can introduce and can sleep well, so that I hope I will not be again confined in an insane asylum, as I was for 8 months. So writes Mrs. GOSWELMAN from Berl., Prussia, Aug., 1898. R. B. Scudder, of Irongton, N. D., is convinced that Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic is the best for neuritis, as it also reduces the attacks.
