Livonia.

The Gazette of last week says: When the Hon. Michael J. Hendrick was here last month he narrowly escaped being killed while attempting to board a train at this station. We said nothing awout the accident at the time, but the Belleville papers got hold of it, and we quote from one of them. The Sun says: "Col. Hendrick, the popular United States consul in Belleville, met with a mishap in Livonia, where he was on a visit to his brother, which was a miraculous escape from a shocking death or serious bodily injury. The colonel left that morning on his return home, and boarded his train, which was moving at the time, on the steps of one of the front cars. He had just placed his feet on the lower step, when a man hurrying past collided with him with such force as to break his hold, and he fell between the platform and the moving train. Fortunately he fell clear of the train, but his face was within a few inches of the wheel until the entire length of the train had passed. With great presence of mind he lay perfectly still, fully conscious of the danger of even moving a limb. The colonel says it was remarkable how slowly the train seemed to drag along, and it appeared almost like ages until the last truck had passed him. Except for the severe mental strain which he underwent, his experience was happily not a painful one, as he sustained no bodily injury whatever; but the adventure was one that he will not soon forget. Col. Hendrick returned home last evening, and his many friends will rejoice that the accident, so dangerous in its character, resulted so fortunately." Col. Hendrick has many acquaintances here, where he frequently visits his brother. He is held in high regard in Belleville, where he holds the office of United States consul

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug., 1895.

Headache troubled me for 18 years; the physicians called it neuralgia and said it was incurable; it became so severe that I had to lay in bed every week two days, but after I took only a few bottles of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic I felt relieved, and after taking six bottles more I am entirely well; therefore recommend the Tonic to all such sufferers. MARIA GRAMBO.

F. Schult writes from Oddens, N. D., July, '95, that he took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic for rheumatic pains, which he had for two years. It cured him.

"Since I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic I am strengthened and can sleep well, so that I hope I will not be again confined in an insane asylum, as I was for 8 months." So writes Mrs. GOBELMAN from Bern, Minn., Aug., 1895.

AMUSEMENTS.

COOK'S

The progress of the negro is slow but sure, and it is in no place as easy to recognize as in John W. Isham's "Oriental America" company, which comes to the Cook Opera House the first three nights next week, for a return engagement. The performance is bright and clean. Billy Eldridge is a clever comedian, and so is Tom Brown and Jube Johnson. There will be be a lot of new acts and specialties to admire, and for the operatic end competent artists will have a new reportoire of gems to offer.

The capital comedian, R. L. (Bob) Graham, plays the principal role of Ross Bolter, a "hustling" theatrical manager, in A. C. Seamon's excellene show piece, "The American Girl," a comedy-drama which is H. Grattan Donelly's greatest effort in play building. Miss Anita Hendric, a prominent artist who has been with leading attractions in past seasons, essays a principal female role. This attraction will be the offering at Cook's Opera House the latter part of next week.

ACADEMY.

The attraction for next week will be the well known Madame and Augustin Neuville, who, as former residents of Rochester, are always welcome visitors, and never fail to draw a large clientage of patrons to their performances. They will present the first half of the week their ever popular play of "The Boy Tramp," of which the public never seem to grow tired, and which holds its own against all new productions

"M'me. Neville is too well known in the part to need extended comment. One cannot help remarking, however, that very many of the leading actresses could take lessons in enunciation from the excellent actress. It is a pleasure to hear her.

Augustin Neuville, as the tramp, is decidedly in it.

"The story of the play is such as to hold the attention of the audience from an early point in the first act until the final drop of the curtain. A number of highly dramatic situations are well brought out, and the special scenery is realistic.

The last half of the week, as a change of bill, "Cell 22" will be produced.

WONDERLAND THEATRE.

That the theatre going people of Rochester appreciate the wonderful Cinematograph is evinced by the continued patronage that they bestow upon Wonderland, and to further show that it is the constant desire of the management of the people's theatre to furnish healthful amusement and instruction to all at popular prices. The Cinematograph will be retained another week, together with a splendid Vaudeville company. The pictures to be shown next week are all new, with two exceptions. A glance at the new pictures as shown at rehearsal, are interesting. The Parade of a French Army Corps in honor of the visit of the Czar of all the Russias; Taking a Photogarph, shows the trials of a French photographer; View of the Elevated Railway at Broadway and 34th street, Horse Shoe Falls, as seen from the Canadian side; Harlequin and Columbine; The Italian infantry, Washington Street, Boston, and Whitehall street, New York; A Dentist Pulling Teeth. Taken as a whole the views to be shown next week are the best of the season. The management takes great pleasure in announcing the following superior Vaudeville artists, direct from Metropolitan theatres: The Harbecks, William and Kitty, phenominal Athletes, introducing Mr. Harbeck in wonderful feats of contortion, and Miss Harbeck, in artistic juggling and slack wire specialties. Return of the favorite, Gracey Emmett, (late Star Waifs of New York company,) in dialect imitations, monologue and vocal selections; Vaunerson and Granel, Horizontal Bar experts; Tony Fernandes, French Musical Grotesque, and Cummins and Gere, in what is often heard of but seldom seen; a Genuine novelty entitled "Mixed and Twisted."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally, in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

The Soft Answer—Swindling Talent Recognized—The Bishop and the Actor—Honesty Rebuked.

A humorous incident happened at the Second regiment's armory in Chicago a short time ago, in which Dr. George Frank Lydston, the surgeon of the regiment, cleverly turned an unintentional insult into a funny climax. It was meeting night, and the doctor and other officers were happily chatting in one of the fieldrooms that looked out on to the street. A pitcher of ice water sat on a table near by. There was also a glass. The jolly disciple of Hippocrates poured out some of the water into the glass, drank deeply and threw the rest of the liquid out of the window. A passing pedestrian caught it right in the face and flew into a rage of anger.

"You ——, —x, z, ——g, w, a—&, !!! z, x!" shouted out the pedestrian at the window, making the atmosphere sulphurous.

"What's the matter with you, man?" asked the doctor, with some surprise, poking his head out to ascertain the cause of the raving jargon beneath

"The matter? You ——, x—z!—&—! What d you throw that water in my face for?" demanded the man below wholly

"Why, my dear sir, what did you expect—whisky in these hard times?" humorously responded the doctor "Drop around when times get better, and I'll throw whisky into your face," he concluded jocosely

At this reply the man below forgot his grievance in the enjoyment of the humor, said not another word and moved on down the street, laughing within himself.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Swindling Talent Recognized.

"The other day a well dressed fellow came in here and ordered a meal amounting to 80 cents," said a Monroe street restaurateur "Before he was ready to leave another man strolled in, took a seat at the same table and ordered coffee and rolls. When the first man finished his meal, he calmly picked up the newcomer's 10 cent check, paid a dime at the cashier's desk and walked out. Of course there was a howl from the remaining customer when he saw that an 80 cent check had been left for him to settle, and we could do nothing but accept 10 cents from him and pocket a loss of 70 cents.

"Yesterday I happened to be behind the cashier's desk when one of the same fellows came up and passed over a 10 cent check. I drew a dime from the drawer, at once I back the coin and said: 'You can't owe me anything. I am a great admirer of nerve. I used to work with Bill Dalton till he was killed; then I drifted into the restaurant business. Go back to your partner there and tell him that his check is settled, too, and that he needn't worry about making a kick about its size this time. And, by the way, have a cigar on me,' I added, handing out a box of the best Havanas

"The fellow looked at me quizzically for a moment, extended his hand for the cigar and said: 'You're a thoroughbred and no mistake. Thanks. I'll just take one for Billy too.' And he did."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Bishop and the Actor.

Speaking of Mr Hare recalls a story about the famous actor which is brand new An old gentleman, whose name is a household word in both New York politics and society, wrote to Mr. Hare the other day inviting him and Mrs Hare to dine with him Sunday night. By the same mail the wife of this man sent an invitation to Bishop and Mrs. Potter, asking them to meet the Hares on Sunday. In this note the hostess made an explanation. "I know that it is against the Bishop's principles to dine out on Sunday night," she wrote, "but I am hoping that he will waive his principles on this occasion, because Sunday night is the only evening on which Mr. Hare is unemployed."

The next day the answer came. It regretted sincerely that the bishop and Mrs Potter could not accept the invitation, because both of them were most anxious to meet Mr. and Mrs. Hare; "but," continued the note sententiously, "unfortunately Sunday evening is the only night on which Bishop Potter is employed."—New York Sun.

He Hasn't Read It.

If one of the stories told at the last meeting of the Society For Political Study is true, it is indeed time that women had a share in the lawmaking of the nation. The story pertained, of course, to the arbitration treaty, which was being so earnestly discussed and was as follows: A number of men were talking about the treaty in a down town club the other night. It was noticeable that one of the men, a well known politician, whose name has already been mentioned as a possible member of the cabinet, kept silent. "What do you think about it?" one of the others at length asked him. "Well, to tell the truth," said the cabinet possibility, though without the slightest hesitation, "I haven't read the thing yet."—New York Sun.

Honesty Rebuked.

After a cable car conductor had passed me several times without asking for my fare I touched his arm and gave him a nickel. A few minutes later as I left the car I found him on the rear platform alone. "Don't ever do that again," he said. "If a conductor misses you, don't hunt him up. He doesn't want you to do it. If I miss a passenger, the chances are about even that none will notice it except the fellow himself. But when he rushes up to pay a fare I have missed everybody notices the fact that I have been negligent, and if there is a 'spotter' aboard I lose my job. The next time save your nickel; it may help me save my position."—Chicago Times-Herald.
