BOOTH-TUCKER'S CASE.

Commander Booth-Tucker of the Salvation Army may have been indiscreet in the religious exercises conducted under his leadership in New York city and for which he has been indicted and convicted of misdemeanor in maintaining a nuisance, but we do not believe the following remarks of the Boston "Republic" meant the conviction are justified:

"If a dance hall, an athletic association, a strolling band of musicians or a young man with an ambition to master the cornet had created disturbances such as those created by the Salvation Army the result would have been the same. A man who owns or leases a house is entitled to its peaceful enjoyment, and whoever interferes with his rights in this respect is amenable to the law. The Salvation Army has its rights and privileges, and the people are extremely liberal in according them, but it is not justified in curtailing or annulling the rights of others."

* Our contemporary to the contrary notwithstanding, there are dance halls in New York that flourish without interruption from the police. There is this difference, too, that the dance hall is a positive nuisance, not only to the immediate residents of the neighborhood but to the whole city, as it subverts the morals of an untold number of persons, while the Salvation Army aims to save souls and reclaim wayward creatures from their evil ways. Again: The police did not indict Mrs. Bradley-Martin for maintaining a nuisance last winter when her fancy dress ball blockaded the streets for several blocks and quarreling hackmen and drunken roysterers made night hideous for the neighborhood. A number of filthy-minded men met at a high-toned restaurant to witness lascivious sights that would not bear description. The participants were indicted several weeks ago, but they have not been brought to trial, and the district attorney of New York says they never will be. Why? The inference is that the indicted parties, being connected with elite society, have too strong a "pull."

We protest most emphatically against making fish of one class of persons and fowl of another.

CORPUS CHRISTI.

Thursday last was the feast of Corpus Christi, whose institution is attributed to the efforts in its behalf made by a holy religious, the Blessed Juliana of Liege in France. It was observed for Urban IV. to order, in 1264, the celebration of the feast by the entire church, though he died before his bull to that effect was published. His successors saw to its execution. In Catholic countries this feast is always kept with great pomp and solemnity. One of the principal features of its observance being a public procession in honor of the blessed sacrament through decorated streets, with benediction given by the bishop from a raised platform at different points of the route.

TROUBLE AHEAD.

Just so surely as the night follows the day will there be a day of retribution for the arrogant cornerers—not of money alone, but of the absolute necessities of life. They will regret that they were not satisfied with fair and legitimate profit on their wares instead of by watered stocks and scandalous combinations forcing up the price of their wares while at the same time lowering the cost of production to such a ruinous figure that the employees are on the verge of starvation.

These conspirators allege that they cannot afford to pay their employees decent wages because competition is so keen that they have to cut prices more than formerly. This is absurd. In most lines of trade there is no competition. Half a dozen firms or companies engaged in one particular line of business will pool issues and agree to maintain prices at a certain figure—always much higher than the prevailing figure. This is a pretty sure preventive of competition. So soon as the combination is effected a reduction in the wages of the workmen follows as a rule. The latter are powerless because the "trust" has closed all these avenues of employment.

Foreign competition is prevented by prohibitory laws, enacted at the behest of the trusts by the legislators whom they own body and soul. The big corporations not only own the legislators but the governors of states and officials in higher places. In but few states are there attorneys general who have backbone enough to resist the encroachments of the corporations. Yes, and there has been no federal attorney-general in several administrations who has not been a subservient tool of the trusts.

We have laws on our statute books to prevent the encroachments of trusts but they might just as well be eliminated, because they are not enforced, and it was never intended that they should be.

Just one instance, and we will close for this time. Does any one suppose for an instant that any legitimate law of trade keeps the price of coal at its present exorbitant figure? Miners are paid less now than in many a year. Railroad rates should not be higher now than in the past. Still coal is higher than it has ever been known in Rochester at this time of the year. It is not the fault of the local sales agents. They have to maintain the prices fixed by the wholesale agents, and these have simply conspired to rob the people, knowing full well the latter have no redress and that they have to burn to coal.

If the people will use the ballot judiciously all this can be changed and with little difficulty.

Out in a Kansas town the school committee has advertised for female teachers for the public schools. The advertisement makes a stipulation that the women must be single, and that they must not marry while engaged in school service. The object of this restriction is to secure the undivided attention of the "schoolmams" to the work for which they are hired. In another town the trustees of a church want a minister. They have advertised for one. They stipulate that he must be married. Evidently they do not want his undivided attention. Queer people are the Kansans.

Archbishop Walsh of Dublin has issued a circular letter to the clergy on the depressed condition of agriculture in Ireland, in which he says: "Is it too much to hope for that, in the presence of so grave a crisis, the people of Ireland may at length open their eyes to the fatal consequences of the humiliating dissensions which some few misguided men, carried away by petty personal jealousy, or by a miserable self-seeking vanity, still succeed in keeping up, to their own disgrace, as well as to the degradation of public life and the rapidly hastening annihilation of all public spirit in our country?"

An East Buffalo man would not consent to be looked up in a police station until a doctor assured him he was drunk. Are the physicians the only experts on intoxication at East Buffalo?

Our readers will heartily endorse the compliment paid to Archbishop Williams by a Boston exchange: "Archbishop Williams, who was probably in Rome in time to participate in the services that were held in St. Peter's on the recent canonization of saints, had an audience with the Pope last week, which fact the cable briefly chronicled. In all probability the archbishop will see His Holiness again in audience before he leaves the Eternal City. The high esteem in which he is held by the Roman authorities because of his prudence his piety and his experience will naturally make Leo XIII. desirous of seeing as much of the archbishop as he can during his present sojourn in Rome; and then it is well known that the Sovereign Pontiff himself holds our chief pastor in the highest esteem and affection."

The head of the Anglican church, Queen Victoria, is to recognize the head of the Catholic church in England during her impending jubilee celebration. It is announced that the jubilee procession will pause before St. George's, Southwark, to enable the queen to listen to an address that is to be made to her by Cardinal Vaughan, who will speak for the Catholics of England. This is not the Cardinal's own church, but it was probably selected because of the jubilee procession passing by it. The Duke of Norfolk, it is also announced, will also read an address on the occasion on behalf of the Catholic laity of England.

Archbishop Corrigan, it will be remembered, was assigned a part in the ceremonies incident upon the dedication of the Grant monument in New York. In asking Archbishop Corrigan to take part in the ceremonies the committee in charge may have remembered the kindly words that Gen. Grant spoke during his last illness at Mount MacGregor of the Catholics when he was told that many of them were praying for his recovery.

Dr. Brewer, who died last month, says the "Ave Maria," deserves immortality as an unconscious humorist. We are gravely informed by his "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable" that St. Thomas was called the Angelic Doctor because he seriously discussed "how many angels could dance on the point of a needle" without tripping; and that the Breviary is "summary or abbreviation of the services of the church." After that it would be no surprise to hear that Artemus Ward and Mrs. Partington were among Dr. Brewer's collaborators.

It would appear that the Rev. R. S. MacArthur is not only a bigot but a plagiarist. The "rev." Orangeman gave forth this utterance from his New York pulpit just prior to sailing for England, there to take part in the queen's jubilee celebration. "Republicans though we are, abating not a jot or tittle of our principles, we can still admire the queenliness of a woman and the womanliness of a queen." According to the "Republic" Dr. MacArthur stole this sentiment from Col. Henry Walker of Boston.

Attorney-General McKenna would do well to ponder the adage of the ancient philosopher: "A place showeth the man; and it showeth some to the better and some to the worse." If he continues as he has begun his epitaph may be what Tacitus wrote of Galba: "One whom all would have considered fit for rule if he had not ruled."

Race prejudice is not confined to Americans. Some English officers have refused to eat at the same table with black officers in the queen's service who have been brought to England to attend the queen's jubilee. Our English friends can now read themselves some of the lectures they have addressed to people on this side of the water.

Rev. J. W. Ford, D. D., a prominent Baptist pastor of Troy, has been on trial on charges of gross immorality. Mr. Ford has been state president of the A. P. A., whose avowed purpose was to purify the morals and politics of the United States.

THE GOSPELS.

GOSPEL: St. Luke, xiv. 16-24.—At that time Jesus spoke to the Pharisees this parable: "A certain man made a great supper and invited many. And he sent his servant at the hour of supper to say to them that were invited that they should come, for now all things are ready. And they began all at once to make excuse. The first said to him: I have bought a farm, and I must needs go out and see it; I pray thee hold me excused. And another said: I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to try them; I pray thee hold me excused. And another said: I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come. And the servant returning told these things to his lord. Then the master of the house, being angry, said to his servant: Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor and the feeble and the blind and the lame. And the servant said: Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room. And the lord said to the servant: Go out into the highways and hedges; and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled. But I say unto you, that none of those men that were invited shall taste of my supper."

WITH FUNERAL DIRGES.

This is the Way New York Will Celebrate Victoria's Jubilee.

Irishmen in New York city are going their brethren in other cities one better, as the sporting fraternity would say, in the matter of the Victoria jubilee celebration. They are not only refusing to jubilate over her majesty's staying qualities, but are passing resolutions like the following:

"Resolved, That the United Irish societies of New York City are hereby most earnestly requested to hold a meeting in that city during the progress of Queen Victoria's jubilee, in commemoration of our patriotic dead and the millions of victims of plague and famine during her reign of sixty years."

This is the meat of a series of resolutions adopted by members of the County Kildare Men's Patriotic and Benevolent association at their meeting. The Mayo men, the Wexford men, and the Galway men have adopted practically the same resolution and it is pretty certain that the other twenty-eight Irish county organizations will fall in line to make this event memorable and unique among great demonstrations.

The Irish societies will decide early next week the form their demonstrations is to assume. The general desire among them is to hire Madison Square Garden, to drape it in black within and without, to secure a monster band to play funeral dirges, and to have Bourke Cockran, Recorder Goff, and John F. Finerty of Chicago and other noted orators deliver in memorial addresses.

Boils, pimples and eruptions, scrofula, salt rheum and all other manifestations of impure blood are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Artificial Ice.

Artificial ice can be made from any water, but in order to produce it absolutely pure and free from germs and bacteria, which of course, is the only ice suitable for domestic purposes, it is necessary to be equipped with machinery and appliances specially constructed and designed for the work. The methods used by the Genesee Fruit Co. are in line with the most advanced and scientific ideas. They use Hemlock water which is first filtered, then converted into steam (distilled,) then brought back to a liquid condition (condensed,) then passes through numerous reboilers and filters.

During the entire process, it is kept from coming in contact with the air. The process is an expensive one, but the desired result, purity, is obtained.

THE POPE'S POEM.

English Translation of Leo's Verses by Andrew Lang.

Pope Leo XIII.'s new Latin poem has been translated for the New York World into English verse by Andrew Lang, the famous scholar, poet and critic, who in a prefatory note to his version for the World says: "The Pope's poem in praise of frugality is on the model of the epistles of Horace. From the reference to coffee he seems to have modern manners in his mind, but the 'banquet of greed' reflects the intemperance of ancient Rome. The translation is necessarily in the manner of the eighteenth century."

The title of the epistle is: "Shun Greed; Be content with Sparse and Frugal Fare: An Epistle to Fabricius Rufus."

I.
What diet lends the strength to life and frees
The flower of health from each malign disease.

The god Ocellus, pupil from of old
And follower of Hippocrates, has told,
Rating base gluttony with anxious air,
He thus laid down the laws of frugal fare;

II.
Neatness comes first. Be thy spare table
Bright
With shining dishes and with napkins white:
Be thy Chianti unadulterate,
To cheer the heart and raise the spirit's Weight.

Yet trust not much the rosy god, in fine,
Be sure that you put water in your wine.
Picked be thy grain and rare thy home-made Bread.

Thy meats be delicate and dainty fed:
Tender, nor highly spiced, thy food, nor
Tease
Thy taste with sauces from Aegean seas
Fresh be thine eggs—hard boiled or newly raw.

Or deftly poached or simply served as plat
"There's wit in poaching eggs," the proverb says.

And you may do them in a hundred ways.

III.

Nor shun the bottle of foaming milk that feeds
The infant and may serve the senior's needs.
Next on the board be heaven's gift, honey, placed.

And sparing of Hyblaean nectar taste,
Pulses and salads on thy guests bestow—
Even in suburban gardeas salads grow.
Add chosen fruits—whate'er the times afford.

Let rose-red apples crown the rustic board.
Last comes the beverage of the Orient shore—

Mocha, far off, the fragrant berries bore.
Taste the dark fluid with a dainty lip,
Digestion waits on pleasure as you sip.

IV.

Such are my precepts for a diet sage
That leads thee safely to a green old age.
But wise Ocellus will would sagely say,
That path of greed lies quite the other way."

That cruel, shameless siren only cares
To trap men's feet and spread her shining enares.

These are her arts: To bid the table shine
With varied ornament and purple line—
Embroidered napkins impudently glow.
The cups are ordered in a gleaming row,
Goblets and beakers, bronze and silver plate.

And fragrant flowers the table decorate.
With these and seeming hospitable word
She draws her guests unconscious to the board.

On couches bids the languid limbs recline,
And brings forth beakers of her choicest wine.

What Chian vineyards or Falernian yield,
And juices of the Amyclean field,
With such liquors as anxious art distills,
From various juices dainty cups she fills.

Rivals in greed devour the juicy cakes,
And guest with guest in drinking emulates.
In oil and spice a boat Lucania swims,
Geese lend their livers, hares their tender limbs;

Midst ortolans and doves as white as snow,
Flesh mixed with fish, and clams with oysters show.

The mighty plate a huge mureaux fills,
Swimming, attended by a shoal of squills.
The gaping guests adore and, feeding fine,
Feast to disgust, and soak themselves in wine.

Then, blown with wine and food and angry,
all
Arise and fight like furies in the hall,
Of fastidious they take their eager fill,
At last with wine and meat o'ercome, are stull.

V.

Greed laughs triumphant in her cruel glee
And drowns her guests like sailors in the sea.
Fell indigestion o'er her work begins:
The liver finds the sinners in their sins:
Languid, perspiring, tortured, timid, they
With limbs that tetter take their devious
way.

With tongues that stammer and with faces
pale,
But greed would yet more potently prevail:
The broken, battered body is her own—
What if the soul herself were overthrown?
And bound to earth in greed's unholy care,
That we inherit of diviner air?

Then, if it might, the flood of greed would roll
E'en o'er the embers of the immortal soul. [Andrew Lang.]

The merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is literally written in blood.
It is traced in the vital fluid
Of millions of the human race.
Its positive medicinal merit
And curative power is written
Upon the hearts, and graven upon
The minds of thousands
Of people whom it has cured
And given them good health
Whet there seemed nothing before
Them but darkness and despair:
It cures all diseases arising
From or promoted by impure
Blood by its intrinsic merit as
The One True Blood Purifier.

Hibernian Rides.

Last Tuesday evening the photographers had the photographs of the members of the company finished, and most of the boys took their pictures home. Those who were not present can obtain them at the gallery, on State street, at any time.

Capt. Quinlivan has a scheme well under way to start a school for the members of Company A, to study the Irish language in the fall and winter. All the members expressed a willingness to co-operate with the captain and make it a success. We have men now who are anxious to study the language of their fatherland—men who regret that they cannot communicate one with another as did their fathers, or like the Germans. This is a most patriotic and praiseworthy endeavor on the part of the captain, and something every member should appreciate. As the captain is getting advanced in years, there is no reason why we should not make one grand effort to accomplish this work and benefit ourselves, and to say that he has left as a memorial to his name a true knowledge of the Irish language.

We are glad to see with us again a good and faithful member—one who has stood by us at all times—Alexander Moore, and we hope he will stay with us for years to come, as he was a true comrade and did what he could for our interests.

Comrade C. J. Dollen and Treasurer M. Connor visited Auxiliary 2 on Wednesday evening and had an enjoyable time. As Connor is one of the best looking men in our company we would not wonder if Cupid was out with his arrow. Probably Dollen knows.
