Early[®] Vicissitudes In the Life of a Famous Jesuit.

Father Nicholas Congiato, who died recently in San Jose, went to California in the early fifties. He had been forced out of Italy in 1848 by the revolution, and landed in New York, whence he was ordered to the presidency of the Jesuit college at Bardstown, Ky.

His talents and training had fitted him to have charge of educational affairs. and, completing his term there, he was sent to California overland. At San Francisco he was made president of St. Ignatius college, which was then being established. He was soon called to leave that important position to go to Oregon and give organization and direction to the various missionaries and educational movements that had been initiated by the Rev. Father de Smet, Father Congisto made this journey overland through many perils. He was compelled to go through territory held at that time by hostile Indiana, and at one point had difficulty in gaining permission from the commander of the sol diers who were holding the hostiles in check, but he finally obtained a reluctant consent. He made the journey safely, carrying in a beit a large amount of gold. He was never molested. The soldiers who bade him adieu on his northern journey awaited in vain news that he had been massacred. While going on a perilous journey with some of Father de Smet's Indian guides from one mission to another he found the trail along the precipitous ande of a mountain blocked by a fallen tree, which he had no means of removing. In attempting to jump his cayuse over the obstruction the animal fell short and precipitated the father down a steep decivity. In awe the Indians put their fingers on their lips and in silence awaited the result. Seeing him gather himself up, they rushed down to inquire of his miraculous escape and were met with the surprising statement:

"I have lost my spectacles " Without these he was practically belpless, but they were found by the guides.

The report of this accident spread and gained interest at each repetition until, when it reached St. Iguatius college in San Francisco, it stated that Father Congisto had been killed. Masses were said for the repose of his soul, and he was believed to be dead, antil one day, having been ordered back to ban Francisco, he surprised the fathers at St. ignatius by appearing among them in the flesh, rugged, resolute and ready for whatever commission awaited him -San Francisco Examiner Proud of a Patch.

A poor boy, with a large patch on one knee of his trousers, was laughed at by a schoolmate, who called him "Old Patch."

"Why don't you fight him?" cried one of the boys. "I'd give it to him if he called me so."

"O," said the boy, "you don't suppose I'm ashamed of my patch, do you? For my part. I'm thankful for a good mother to keep me out of rags. I'm proud of the patch for her sake." A patch is better than a hole, and patched garments which are paid for are more comfortable than new orea which make a man afraid to meet his tailor.

An interesting contemporary portrait of Blessed Thomas More, who was Speaker of the House of Commons Din 1523, has just been discovered by his present successor in the chair. The portrait was found in one of the rooms of the speaker's house and was black with age. It has now been care-fully restored and hung up in its place of honor in the unique gallery of portraits of former speakers. In this connection it is curlous to note that Bir Thomas More was one of the two speakers of the House of Commons who afterwards, by being promoted to the woolsack, became speaker of the House of Lords. During the first year of the civil war there was nothing in the pomp and panoply of glorious war which so excited the wonder and amusement of foreigners as the variegated uniforms to be seen at the capital Although everybody knew that the Federal uniform was blue, it was the rarest thing to find absolute acquaintance in this central idea. The Bungtown rangers, the Pickwacket hornets, the Skidaddle zonaves, as the case might be, all marched complacent. ly in some uniform evolved from their untutored fancies and patriotic intentions. The grote-same combination of green, blue or yellow, with stripes of all kinds and gold braids and knots and queer disks stuck anywhere, brass plates bestowed indiscriminately, borne by men who brushed their evebrows against the grain or flurried their mas taches in unconscious obedience to King Henry's exhortation, were indeed marvel to European officers.

The Confederates, while standing to their colors (Confederate gray) in the main, still had their own variations as off color organizations. Indeed ramor bad it that a highland regiment was disporting its bare legs somewhere in Carolina where the population was largely Scottish, and zonaves galore Mrs. H. Ganley and children of Farm. swaggered baggily through Lonisiana, their ancestors being largely French. But the most eccentric departure from Color usage was beheld in the first battle of Bull Run, where several prisoners were found to be clad in a coarse fabric of blue and white stripes, which, on close inspection, proved to be common bedticking. The object of such apparel for summer wear was obvious, it being strong, light and not likely to show the dirt. By common consent these men were called the bedtick zonaves. -- New York Sun.
