INTEGRITY NOT FOR SALE. Ohio Farmer Played Euchre With the Lobbyist to Prove It.

A few years ago, when a United States Senatorial election was impending in Ohio, one of the leading candidates needed another vote to make his election sure, and his campaign manager, after canvassing the situation, began work upon a bucolic representative from one of the Western Reserve counties.

The old man grew very indignant at the first hint of money in connection with his vote. He fumed a great deal, swore a little, and very melodramatically asserted that "his manhood was not for sale at any price. Gradually the fact was impressed upon him that the one necessary vote could be secured in another quarter, and that his obstinacy would have no effect upon the Senatorial result, anyway, while it might materially affect his pocket-book.

Thereupon the old fellow made an eloquent plea in his own behalf. He strongly asserted that he was an honest man, whose reputation was as dear to him as his life, and whose character always had been unspotted by contact with the world.

"You will readily understand, sir," he added, "that having so much at stake as I do, it would be impossible for me to entertain for one moment any proposition you might make to try to influence my vote in this matter. My vote is not for sale, but I have no ill-feeling toward you for what you have tried to do. And as proof of that fact I'll go right over to your room now, and join you in a social game of euchre, just between ourselves."

"All right," assented the lobbyist, "I'm pretty busy, but I guess I can find time enough for a single rubber with you. How about stakes?" "Twenty-five hundred a corner." "No—two thousand." They played. The lobbyist lost. The man from the Western Reserve voted for the candidate who was elected Senator.—Chicago Times-Herald.
