CURRENT STYLES.

WHAT TO WEAR AND HOW TO MAKE IT.

May Mantons' White Regarding Seasonable Toilettes—Latest Style in Ladies' Cape Wrap—Ladies' BoleroWaist—Ladies' Five-Gored Skirt With Fan Neck.

Silver-gray cashmere and almond taffeta silk are the materials represented in this stylish basque; the loose portion of the bodice being made of the taffeta and trimmed with lines of beige ribbon that hold to position the ruffles of cream-white lace. The foundation consists of a glove-fitted body lining that is adjusted by the usual number of seams and double bust-darts, and closes invisibly at the centre-front. The full-fronts are gathered at the neck and at the waist and may close invisibly at the centre-front, as illustrated, or on the left shoulder, arm's-eye and under-arm seam. A distinctive feature of this design is the dressy little bolero which is included in the shoulder and under-arm seams and has the free edges decorated with ribbon in two widths. Smooth under-arm gores separate the fronts from the back, which shows two plaits on each side of the centre-back extending from the shoulders to the waist where they are brought closely together.

The waist is encircled by a wide black satin girdle that is deepest at the centre-front, where three chic bows form the finish. The collar con-ists of a plain, close band overlaid with a stock of satin surmounted by a full ruffle of lace. The mousetraire sleeves are mounted upon two-seamed linings and are decorated at the wrists with a deep frill of lace and bands of beige ribbon. The mode, which is admirably adapted to early fall wear, can be developed in all seasonable fabrics, and may be composed of two or even three materials as combinations are the order of the day.

To make this basque for a lady in the medium size will require three yards of four-four-inch material, or two and one-half yards with five-eighths of a yard of contrasting material for the full-front.

Ladies' Five-Gored Skirt With Fan Neck. Rich novelty goods, passementerie and large ornamental buttons are judiciously combined in this stylish skirt that introduces the present fancy for trimmed skirts. The shaping is accomplished by five gores. The right edge of the front gore is seamed to the corresponding edge of the side gore while the left edge of the front is cut in two large squares or tabs, the free edges of which are defined with the passementerie, the handsome buttons affording an appropriate finish. The side gores are a trifle circular in shape and present a modest flare toward the lower edge, which is further emphasized by a narrow interlining of half-cloth; the back gores are laid in fan-shape plaits on each side of the placket opening which is at the centre-back. The top is completed by a narrow belt. Skirts of this description can be developed in any of the seasonable fabrics. Ample opportunity being given for that display of fashionable garniture, or a neat finish of machine stitching in latest style is also an appropriate detail.

To make this skirt for a lady in the medium size will require five and three-eighths yards of four-four-inch material.

Ladies' Cape Wrap.

However much jackets may take precedence as wraps, something that partakes of the nature of a cape is always needed. The tasteful and stylish wrap shown in the illustration exemplifies the latest style and is sufficiently snug-fitting to avoid chill at the same time that it allows of wearing an elaborate bodice without danger of rumpling. The backs are seamed down the centre and tight-fitting to the waist line, below which they are laid in plaits. The loose fronts are laid in double box-plaits, one at each side of the closing, and the ample sleeves, of bell shape, are seamed to the backs and shoulders, but are so constructed as to become part of the front, there being no seam below the shoulder joint. Attached to the waist at the back are black silk ribbons, which pass around and tie at the front. As illustrated, the material is silk velvet, with handsome jet passementerie as trimming. The collar is Modest style, but cut in squares, which not only increases the flare, but but is universally becoming, as well. At the throat is worn an ample bow of chiffon lace, edged, and a toque of velvet and feathers completes the costume. The wrap is lined throughout with taffeta silk and has an interlining of split wool wadding, which renders it amply warm without being in the least clumsy. Cloth, with rough or smooth-faced seal plush, and all familiar cloakings are suitable. To make this wrap for a lady in the medium size will require two and one-fourth yards of fifty-four-inch material.

WOMEN AS ENTERTAINERS.

After Dinner and Luncheon They Recline and Whistle.

With the short dinner has come the necessity of some form of entertainment to succeed the meal. Unless it is to be followed by the theater or a dance the hostess must provide some special amusement for her guests. Old-fashioned dinner givers remember the days when brilliant conversation, quick wit and ready repartee filled the hour after the gentlemen rejoined the ladies, but all that is passed.

In Japan, when the host does not engage some geisha girls to dance at his feast, he generally brings in a celebrated free-hand artist, who, kneeling before each guest, draws a dainty bud or flower and presents it as a souvenir of the occasion.

In New York vaudeville performers and flashlight photographers were in vogue for a while, but their popularity was short lived. No one cared to see herself distorted in makeshift pictures, and the objections to artists of the vaudeville stage were many and appetizing. Now it is the "reduced gentleman" who has advanced into position and who is in great and ever-increasing requisition.

A young woman who in her palmy days went whistling through her father's house, and heard occasional warnings about "wandering girls and crowding home," now that she has an endowed mother to support, practices her art professionally, and receives $25 for a tune or two whistled in milady's drawing room after dinner.

Another girl, whose talent for mimicry was severely suppressed when she lived in a brown-stone front on Madison avenue, now pays the rent and household expenses of a small but pretty apartment for herself and three younger sisters by reciting humorous stories after a luncheon or dinner.

These paid entertainers are almost always women; very few men—always excepting singers—having the courage to appear in this manner.

What a Trained Nurse Knows.

Many bright young women, who have to make their own living, are entering this noble profession, for it fully deserves that name. Following is an interesting statement of what she learns at the school where she is trained. It is from the pen of a well-known physician.

She will be practically instructed in cooking, and in serving and preparing delicacies for the sick. She will be taught the best methods of ventilating the sick room, and of keeping all instruments surgically clean and disinfected.

She will learn to observe and report accurately to the physician the state of the patient's respiration, expectoration, pulse, skin, appetite, temperature of the body, intelligence—as delirium or stupor—breathing, sleep, condition of wounds and eruptions, and the effect of diet, rest, stimulants and medicines.

She will soon know how to act in an emergency. Many a patient has been saved because the nurse "kept her head" and knew what to do at the right moment.

Nurses are taught the administration of medicines and the application of external remedies, how to take notes on cases, the making up of the nurse's record, and the reports to the attending doctor.

The course of training includes a fixed course of instruction from text books, mainly given by the superintendent of nurses and her assistants. Lectures and demonstrations are given at stated times by the medical and surgical staff of the hospital. "Quizzes," tests by question and answer, are held at intervals, and examinations, both written and oral, complete the term.

Small Anecdotes.

It is a popular notion that our forefathers were bigger than we are, and that civilization tends to make men smaller. The idea received a shock when it was found that old armor and in the Egyptian tombs was too small for some of the modern champions. Recent measurements of the skeleton would appear to show that civilization tends to increase the size of men and women, and also to increase the difference of size between men and women.

Much Sweeter Than Sugar.

The newly discovered chemical substance, angarin, or benzo-anthra, is likely to have an important influence upon commerce in several directions. Unlike saccharine, which never became very popular, angarin contains none of the objectionable parts. It is a chemically pure substance, 500 times as sweet as sugar, and yet obtainable at one-twelfth the cost.
