RELIGION AND EDUCATION

positions of religion and education will soon have the approval and sanction of all conservative and thoughtful non-Catholics. This is evidenced by a scholarly and fair presentation of the question in the "North American Review" by Amasa Thompson. He makes a strong plea for a place in the Mary's seminary in Baltimore draws public school curriculum for the inonleation of Christian doctrines and ethics. This is the more necessary, St. Charles who made their theologihe contends, because the number of cal course at St. Mary's are to be church attendants is growing smaller found in many American dioceses laar by year, and consequently religion receives little encouragement in the home. Most American adults are licott city a large number of clergyindifferent to religion, according to Mr. Thompson. Those who are growing up are likely to be in a worse condition. In the near future he looks for a Godless people and a Godless

Mr. Thompson virtually acknowledges the justice of the position of the Baltimore, Most Rev. Dr. Marechal, Catholic church in maintaining that so long as religion is eliminated from the public school curriculum and thus render separate Catholic schools an absolute necessity, the amount of the school tax contributed by Catholics should be set apart for these schools when he says that the religious instruction he deems necessary can be given only by an almost entire change of policy of religious teaching in the public schools and the encouragement Oliver L. Jenkins as its first president. of private schools in which religious teaching is given.

Mr. Thompson is severe in his condemnation of those who oppose religious teaching in the public schools.

"I am firmly convinced," he says, "that one of the greatest blunders that have been made in our country in the last half century has been the failure to educate the American youth in Bible truths and teachings; and the result of such failure may bring disaster, The Catholic church has insisted that it is its duty to educate the children of parents of the Catholic faith in such a way as to fix religious truths in the youthful mind. For this it has been assailed by the non-Catholie population, and Catholics have even been charged with being enemies of the liberties of the people and of the dag. Any careful observer in the city of New York can see that the only people, as a class, who are teaching the children in the way that will seoure the future for the best civilization are the Catholics; and although a Protestant of the firmest kind I believe the time has come to recognize this fact, and to lay aside religious prejudices and patriotically meet this question."

Is not Mr. Thompson's position almost precisely what that of the Cathoc church has been, is and will be mill our non-Catholic friends are sale vinced of the injustice of their want concede to us our rights?

BIGOTRY DEFEATED

The Minneapolis public library trustees have decided to take from the shelves of their institution Coffin's Story of Liberty." The volume will not only be withdrawn from circulation but will not be retained as a work of reference. The only member of the board who held out for its retention was a woman!

Who Coffin was and what his book contains is thus pointedly told by the Boston "Republic:"

"This work we have repeatedly condemned as a vicious publication. It was written by Charles Carleton Coffin of this city. Mr. Coffin was a fine specimen of the New England bigot. He was narrow, vindictive, brutally indifferent to the truths of history or the feelings of his fellowmen who did not believe as he believed. He was a correspondent of the Boston 'Journal' during the civil war. During his later life he devoted himself to writing and lecturing on war topics. Before he died he wrote 'The Story of Liberty,' which was a story of religious intolerance and hate All the thread-bare scandals and libels against the Catholic church were rehashed in this volume and served up in as attractive a manner as possible. It was intended for the perusal of the young, and an effort was made to make it a standard work for schools."

The "Irish Standard" called the attention of the public library trustees of Minneapolis to the book, and poited out its errors of statement and its utter unfairness in dealing with the The Catholic view on the relative facts of history.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.

If Catholic clergymen in general were to follow the example of Rev. James L. Smith, pastor of the Sacred events. Heart church, Weir Village, Taunton, in the Providence diocese, Catholic papers would be distinct gainers. Father Smith sent the diocesan paper $100 recently, stipulating that for the ensuing year copies of it should be sent to fifty of his parishioners, who would agree to subscribe themselves for the paper the following year at least, and afterwards as they saw fit.

Such a course as that, if generally rectly? copied, would swell the subscription lists of the Catholic press, and why should it not be imitated?

Says the Boston "Republic:" "One of the renowned speakers at the recent child study congress held in New York, Rev. M. A CASCADE OF CATTLE

MEMORABLE STAMPEDE IN A HERD OF MANY THOUSANDS.

The Wild Frenzy of Sixteen Thousand Texas Steers, of Which One-fifth Plunged to Their Death in a Ridden Ravine-As Exciting Night on the Prairie.

One of the most desperate stampedes of cattle ever witnessed by a Texas cowboy, says Rev. J. B. Cranfill of Waco, Texas, occurred in 1876 on the prairie in the center of which now stands the town of McGregor. Fifteen thousand cattle and twentyfive cowboys participated in the exciting event.

Late in the afternoon of July 4 there had been a lively thunder storm, that made the cattle nervous. At 10 o'clock at night, however, they seemed to be sleeping profoundly. Then the narrative proceeds as follows:

"The stars were all shining, and there was no cause at all for the arousing of the herd. They appeared to get up all at once, with a single purpose, and the roar that was heard seemed to come from a single throat. The Wilson brothers and their cowboys, who were sleeping in their camp, rushed to their ponies, who were grazing with the saddles and bridles on. and, as fast as the bits could be replaced in their mouths, they mounted and galloped to the flanks of the now disappearing mass, headed in the direction of the Brazos river."

"Some cattle can outrun others, and in this case there was a bunch of about fifty fully twenty yards in advance, and toward this leading group the two rescuers rode. Of the leading group, also, some were faster than others, and this group ran in a diamond shape, with two immense steers leading all. When Mr Wilson and his companion reached the two leading steers they began shooting their revolvers close to them, and in that way the bunch was made to oblique, and as the leading bunch of cattle obliqued the main stampede obliqued, and the first step in 'milling' had been taken. By this time the cattle were getting tired. Nearly five miles had been covered, and the breath of the leaders was coming short and painfully, but they were rushing on because the front cattle at this time knew as a matter of fact their only safety was in keeping up the run. Those behind were coming, and they were in the majority, and the leaders were compelled to run. There was real danger for the forward members of the stampede.

"In the invoice of articles contained in the regulation 'outfit' there is always some kind of stimulants, and but for the stimulants contained in Mr Wilson's outfit, it is possible that the stampede would have been halted along, one of the best cowboys in the southwest. This Mexican and his horse always reminded those who saw rode far forward and bent over, so that he and his horse appeared to be one animal No horse, however rugged 'wild and woolly,' had ever been able to unseat him. This Azter had been to the little brandy rivulet too often. and had filled and empted his tir cup with surreptitious intoxicants, so that his usual excellent judgment went awry. When he succeeded in getting mounted, after having fumbled with his bridle a good deal, he was far in the rear, and the stampede had gone past him, so that when he overtook the rear end he passed to the front on the other side and rode on the wrong flank. When he reached the head of the herd he was just in time to defeat the maneuver then under execution of bending the moving mass from a straight line to a semi-circle. Revolver in hand, disregarding the other men, he began shooting in the faces of the wild steers, and the effect of this was to straighten the run and bring the advance straight toward a précipice. This precipice was a wash in the prairie, forming a deep ravine fully thirty yards wide, and in a shorter time than it takes to tell of this contretempts, the head of the column was pouring over, a horrible cascade of beef, plunging madly into destruction, while fleeing from an imaginary "When Mr. Wilson and his lieutenants saw that it was impossible to save their cattle they saved themselves by dexterously turning at right angles at full speed and riding out of the way. They next returned to the flank and held a council of war. A few seconds decided them, and all hands commenced shooting into the herd, the object now being to build a breastwork of carcasses and save the rear end from the destruction that had overtaken the front. The guiley was nearly full of cattle by this time. They were enorting and bellowing, crashing and tearing, and still heaping up, and when the firing began the wounded ones tumbled over on the others, and in a short time the gulley, like the sunken road at Waterloo, was bridged by carcasses. The herd surged up in billows, like an ocean, and bent now, because it could not do otherwise. The semi-circle was formed, and Wilson and his men crossed the gulley below and rode around the opposite side and recrossed, and in a short time they had the cattle halted forming an incomplete letter O, and there they stood blowing, bellowing, shivering, All hands remained on watch all night. and in the morning, when a count was made, it was ascertainned that 2,700 head were missing. There were afterward 2,700 pairs of horns taken from that gulley. It was called Stampede Gulley for many years afterward, and perhaps will always, with some people, be remembered by that name."

RHEUMATISM.

Pensants' Poculiar Method Treating the Ailment.

The Russian possants, more especially those residing in the neighborhood of Moscow, have a peculiar and original method of treating themselves for that bane of mankind, rheumatism. Many cures, even in bad cases, are, it is claimed, affected by making the patient take ant baths.

The manner of preparing these baths is as fellows: An anthill is sought, and when found, a sack is filled with ants, ant's eggs, and if it be considered necessary, a certain quantity of the earth which composes the hill. The sack is then closed hermetically and carried to the home of the sufferer. A warm bath is already prepared here, and the sack is plunged bodily into the hot water. Soon this latter begins to give off a peculiar pungent odor, characteristic of formic acid. The bath is now ready for the patient's immersion. The action of the bath on the skin is one of intense irritation, and the result seems to be a drawing out of the evil, and the consequent disappearance of the rheumatic pains.

It is advisable for any one who may be tempted to try this remedy to be careful not to remain too long in the ant bath, as the consequence might be a total disorganization of the skin, which would peel off, due to the violent action of the acid.

Vanity in Children.

Mothers are often responsible for the vanity which they may deplore in their daughters. The atmosphere of the home is too largely one of, perhaps, millinery and mantau-making. The dress of young children is often so exquisite that continual caution is necessary to prevent its injury, and play is robbed of spontaneity and activity. A mother who had educated her children to all the punctilities of dress, said: "I regret so much the exquisite wardrebe of my little children. I see now that it hurts their character." The dress of little girls should be as simple and substantial as that of boys. Everything which prevents activity and fosters vanity should be conscientiously avoided. Love of dress is also fostered by the passion for dolls, which is said to be inborn in every right-minded girl. Doll-playing is really doll-dressing. Every bit of gew-gaw is eagerly sought to bedeck this miniature travesty of a fine lady. The dollmother is but a prophecy of the childmother. If doll-playing is a legitimate occupation of girtheod, we ought to have dolls which do not cultivate a taste for wasp waists and the trivialities of fashion.

The Wile's Letters. The question is again being discussthe right to open and read his wife's letters. Fifty years ago this right was never questioned, but in America of late the courts have taken the ground that this right does not exist. A decision to that effect is quoted as a curiosity in France, where it is held that a wife has no right to a private correspondence. European laws imply that a wife may not demand privacy in her correspondence, but that she and her husband are one and he is that one-for she is strictly forbidden to read or open his letters and even if they are left lying around she has no legal right to use any information she may extract from them which is damaging to her husband. On the other hand, her husband is upheld even when he employs treachery in getting hold of her letters.

An Unfortunate Illustration. An incident in the trial of a lawsuit in Judge Henry's court, Kansas City, made the jury burst out laughing. Ela Downend was suing Kansas City for $5.000 because of injuries she received by tripping over a step in the sidewalk on Twenty-third street, near Woodland. Attorney George Jones, representing the city, said all through the trial that the step was no more than the step to the witness chair in front of the jury, and a person would be no more liable to stumble over it.

"And you know, gentlemen, that no person would be likely to trip over that step there," said Mr. Jones, pointing to the step before him. A moment later Mr. Jones started to go to the witness chair and stumbled over that very step and fell sprawlist

The proprietress of a Brighton boarding house was musing over her menu. In her company sat the lady who had just sunk $5,000 in the concern and who was being initiated into the mysteries of the profession. "Now, then, dear," said the principal, "soup-what shall we call it?" "Well," replied her companion. "I suppose that depends upon what it is made of." "Ah, ask rather upon what it is not made of. But, of course, as you are now one of us. I don't mind telling you that, though it is a most nutritious article of diet, it is manufactured from the little et ceteras which our guests leave on the edges of their plates." "Then I think you had better put it down as 'potage a l'omnibus.'

16,000 Miles of Street Cars.

There are in the United States street railway and traction lines, city, suburban and inter-urban, aggregating 15,956 miles in length, or enough to make nearly five complete lines from New York city to San Francisco. These figures which are corrected up to December 1. show an increase in mileage of 2,780 within two years. To operate these roads requires 28,154 passenger cars, 20,777 motor cars, 206 dummics and 28,621 horses. Since 1891 the number of horses has declined 162,000 or 30 per cent.
