BABY LOCOMOTIVE.

Built and Put in Operation by Two

New England Boys. Edwin H. Warren and Ernest C. Warren are two Montvale (Mass.) boys, aged respectively 17 and 15. They are students at the Woburn high school from which they will probably be graduated two years bence. Unlike most boys of their years, they care little for baseball and less for the mad scrimmage of the football field. Their home is on rising ground near the railway station and their newest toy is a locomotive which they, with the aid of their father, Mr. Herbert A. Warren, constructed and placed in operation on a 120-foot track. The locometive weighs about a ton and a half, and were such engines animals that developed like cows this one might very aptly be called a yearling.

It is an out-and-out locomotive from headlight to cab. The wheels on the bogie track once did duty as pulleys in a mill. They are 22 inches in diameter. The drivers once were pulleys, but they are larger, measuring 30 inches. There is no connecting rod, but in its stead a belt is compelled to impart power to the drivers from the force induced by the twin cylinders under the forepart of the holler. The boiler is three feet long and two feet bore. It was originally intended for a heating apparatus and the three feet of the fire box makes the iron part of the locomotive about six feet in length. Recently the engineers and firemen on the Boston & Maine road were amased one day to see a saucy duplicate in miniature of the big moguls of the regular rail. The little engine tooted salute after salute as the local and express trains rolled passed the Warren home, and engineers and firemen waved responses from the cab windows. The engine was a success and from the morning that it was first run out of the little eight by twelve house built to ehelter it there has never been a time that it has refused to answer to the requests of the throttle and the reverse lever.

Our Boys Should Remember, That piety is not priggishness.

That bigness is not greatness. That it requires pluck to be patient. That it takes more than muscle to make a man.

That selfishness is the most unmanly thing in the world.

That consideration for mother and sisters does more to mark a gentleman than the kind of neckties he wears. That the only whole man is the holy

An Ostrich's Appetite.

An ostrich will eat almost anything. It swallows oranges, small turtles, fowls, kittens and bones. A South African writer tells of one swallowing a box of peaches, tennis brils, several yards of fencing wire and half a dozen cartridges. One followed the workmen and picked up the wire as they cut it. Most frequently the ostrich does not swallow each dainty separately, but collects several in its throat and then swallows them all at once. Sometimes it is strangled. Its windpipe is then cut, the obstacle taken out and the wound sewed up, when all goes well again.

Shed Their Clothes in Winter. When the boys and girls are putting on more clothing to keep out the cold a curious rock crab that lives in the salt water along the New England coast sheds its shell. These little creatures begin casting their hard shells in December, and the shedding process continues for two months. After the hard shells are cast the crabs are quite soft, and are considered very desirable for the table.

Little Princess' Trick Awheel. The best cyclist among the royal children, who are all instructed in the art of managing a bicycle so soon as they arrive at a suitable age, is the little Princess Margaret of Connaught. Her royal highness has a firm seat and a graceful carriage and often astonishes her cousins with her clever little

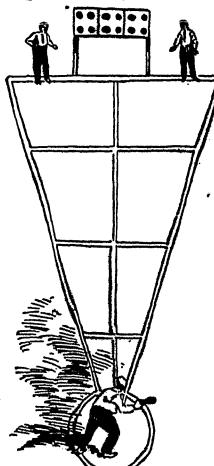

SNAKES DO NOT BITE

Jawa Connected Only by a Cartilage and Cannot Come Together With Parce.

It is a common error that snakes bite. Snakes do not bite. Their jaws are connected only by a cartilage and cannot be brought together with any force. The poisonous snake strikes from its coil, throws its head and body forward and books its fangs into the object aimed at. The entire work is done with the upper faw. The sernent does not swallow its prey, but slowly draws itself over the creature it devours. It is enabled to do so by the elasticity of the skin and the extraordinarily loose condition of the teeth-bearing bones of its fangs. As for a snake depositing a thick slime all over its prey before awallowing it, it is a mistake. The tongue does not carry moisture enough to do this, but when once inside the animal there to an abundance of saliva. The tongue is looked upon as a sting, and the common respection it "Look out for its sting!"

The tongue is a mobile, extensile organ of both touch and taste. So faz from being a sting, the delicate implement is of the greatest use, and expresss fear, anger or pleasure. The tongue of a snake is very important to its owner, as the slightest injury even to its tips generally results in the snake's death.

Bag Ball. Bag ball is a new game freshly imported from England. It is adapted to the tastes of both old and young and open air. The game is played with sional companies. tennis balls and rackets and a receiving board. Forty-five feet is suggested as a proper distance from the striking point to the receiving board, but this is not arbitrary. The balls are to be 13 red and 12 white lawn tennis ones, and friends, the game is won by those who first play six balls through the holes into the net at the back of the receiving board. The server or bowler delivers, underhand, 12 balls into the rebound unless the striker is "out" before the 12 are bowled. Balls that do not pitch into the rebound are "no balls," and three bowled thus in succession count one to the striker. The striker stands evening, with one foot within or on the line forming the striking circle and hits the ball as it rises from the rebound, endeavoring to bat it into one of the holes on the receiving board. The striker is "out" if he misses three properly bowled balls in succession, or if the ball should be caught by an oppo- ers, will be opened for the season on Deconent as it rebounds from the receiving board, or if caught by the server, and also when 12 properly bowled balls have been delivered. The server takes the place of the striker in turn. When more than two are playing, all may play against one another or sides may be chosen.

Lisard Against Snake. A remarkable story of a contest between a snake and a lizard comes from nearly half a day. The lizard would run up a sapling clear to the top and patiently wait while the snake wound its way about half way up the sapling. Then he would jump from the top of the tree to the ground, and the snake both striking the ground about the same time, but before the snake could get himself straightened out the lizard, which did not have to uncoil, would scale up another sapling. Then the snake would repeat its efforts to procure a dinner. The snake, not being a ready climber, was at a great disadvantage in the contest, and after many efforts apparently gave it up as a fruitless job.
