What Our Friends in the Surrounding Parishes are Doing.

Cornberg.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rooney were in Town during the past week attending the funeral of a relative.

The Rev. Fathers Cahill and Keran closed on Sunday evening a successful two weeks' mission at St. Mary's church. The Papal benediction was given to all present on Sunday evening.

The marriage of Miss Mary F. Hickey of Binghamton to John E. Gill of this city occurred on Wednesday morning at Binghamton. The groom is a well known and popular Cornell young man and will receive the congratulations of numerous friends in this city.

John Maloney, son of Mrs. Bridget Maloney, died on Friday of lung disease at his home, 110 West Erie avenue. He was 37 years old and unmarried, a man of excellent character, highly esteemed by all who knew him. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church on Monday morning. Requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. J. M. Buxton. The bearers were Jas. Arthur, Henry Green, John Deegan, Chas. McCarthy.

Rev. Bishop McQuaid of Rochester was expected here the latter part of last week to administer the sacrament of confirmation to a class of about 50 adults, but owing to ill health he was unable to come, and the administration of the sacrament has been postponed for the present.

John S. Kennedy states that the king of the Rough Riders, "Teddy" Roosevelt, will be in Corning Oct. 25 or thereabouts. Every one has heard of this war hero who has made himself the idol of the men who fought with him and under him, and his coming here will no doubt stir up quite a flutter among politicians of all kinds and men who have no interest in politics. He comes, of course, as the republican nominee for governor.

"The Night-walkers" is the name of an organization of young men in Elmira who like fresh air and exercise and who are obliged to work indoors all day and take their constitutional in the evening. They meet Tuesday evenings and tramp out into the country somewhere, where they cook and enjoy a meal and tramp back again. It seems surprising that we have nothing of the sort here when we consider the many delightful "walks" there are around Corning and the number of our young men who are obliged to work indoors all day.

Verily these street cars that, as the old woman said, go screaming through the night like lost souls and, as J. T. Sullivan says, killing whom they wish on their way, must be dreadful monsters. I wonder.

Miss Mame Danaher of Elmira has been visiting Miss Mary Donahue of this city.

A strange death was that of the infant son of Mrs. George O. Smith, who was formerly Miss Magie Howard. On Sunday last Mrs. Smith was driving in company with a sister-in-law and another relative out to the Bailey farm with her infant in her arms. Just before the carriage reached its destination the baby cried, and on being taken into the house was found to be dead. Coroner Goff, after an examination of the child, opined that death had resulted from the bursting of a blood vessel. Mr. Smith, the father, who is a glass blower in Cleveland, O., arrived here on Monday and saw his child for the first time. The baby was six weeks old.

The first of the entertainments of Joint Society lecture course of the Normal school, will be a lecture by Prof. Walker T. Washington, the great colored orator, Wednesday evening, Oct. 26th. Subject, "The Race Problem."

The citizens of this village were shocked Saturday morning last to learn of the death of Richard M. Cullinan at his home on South street, shortly after 7 o'clock of that morning. Mr. Cullinan has been unwell for some months, suffering apparently from rheumatism for which ailment he has taken a course of treatment at the Avon Sanitarium, but becoming no better, placed himself under the care of Dr. Zimmer of Rochester, who pronounced his illness heart trouble both valvular and muscular, and advised quiet and rest for a time. On Saturday morning he appeared very cheerful and his wife prepared to go to Rochester at his request to get medicine from his physician.

In response to a request from him, his wife went down stairs to get him drink of water, and on returning found him gasping for breath. Hurrying to the bed she raised him in her arms, when, without uttering a word, he died. "Dick," as he was familiarly known, was born in this village August 18th, 1871. He resided here all his life, taking a course in the Normal school, and afterwards attending the Rochester Business University. In 1896 he was married to Miss Fanny Mills of Mt. Morris, and since that time has resided at the family home on South street. For many years Jeremiah Cullinan has conducted a grocery store in this village, and since he was large enough "Dick" has assisted him until the last few weeks he has assumed the management.

Honest, straight forward, mainly, truthful, those were four virtues for which "Dick" Cullinan was well known. Ever on the alert for his future business and welfare he had gained for himself an enviable reputation as a business man, and the father who had labored early and late for many years had his future brightened by the prospects of his son's ability as a manager and financier. But all was for naught and a heart-broken young wife a father and a brother mourn for him. The funeral services were held from St. Mary's church, Monday morning at 10 o'clock with a requiem mass, Rev. J. J. Hickey as celebrant; Rev. M. J. Hendrick of Avon, deacon; Rev. J. H. Day of Mt. Morris, sub-deacon and Rev. Father Rawlinson also of Mt. Morris, master of ceremonies. The business places of the village and a moving men marched to the church in a body. The W. A. Wadsworth Guards of Avon, of which his father is commander, accompanied the remains to the church, and thence to the cemetery acting as escort. The pall bearers were T. C. Reagan, Chas. T. Sexton, Thos. Costello, C. E. Hawley, I. C. O'Connor, and Ed. DeVany of Roch-ester. Elmira.

The first weekly meeting of the "Subscriber's Social Club" will be held at Industrial Hall Tuesday evening Oct. 25th. Prof. Stagg will be the instructor.

Last Sunday morning during the celebration of high mass at St. Patrick's church, tidings came to the beloved pastor, Rev. J. J. Bloomer, that his aged mother, Mrs. Catherine Logan, had peacefully passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Connelly, on College avenue. Father Bloomer was overcome by emotion and wept bitterly as he asked the congregation to pray for the repose of his mother's soul. Mrs. Catherine Logan was born in Ireland, fifty-five years ago, and came to America about four years since. She married twice, two children being the fruit of her first union, and one by her second husband. Of the latter Father Bloomer and Mrs. J. J. Connelly survive. Mrs. Logan was a lovely, Christian woman, greatly admired by all for her beautiful traits of character. Her death was the result of an illness of ten days. The funeral was held at J. J. Connelly's residence on College avenue, Tuesday morning at 8.30, and from St. Patrick's church afterwards. The remains were taken to Philadelphia, at which city services were held in St. Paul's Cathedral, and interment was in the family plot.

Sunday noon at his late home on South Main street, occurred the death of Patrick Maloney. Deceased was forty-six years of age, and his mother and four daughters mourn his demise. The funeral was held Tuesday morning from St. Mary's church, interment being in St. Peter and Paul's cemetery.

New Styles

Of Gloves.

Wise manufacturers of Fine Kid Gloves have done their best to bring out completely new things for the autumn of 1898. New achievements have been scored in designing, coloring and dainty finishing—and the worthiest of these new Kid Glove styles are at these counters in abundance. In short, there never was a time when "Burke's" Glove Department was more interesting than now. But none of this Glove newness is in the slightest degree experimental. Every new feature is but an improvement—an additional handsomeness and betterment—given to makes of Fine Gloves that we have sold to a fully satisfied public for many years.

HOT WATER STREET LAMPS.

The Latest Thing in Applied Science in London.

There have been rumors that the latest thing in applied science was to be street lamps for London that should supply the weary pedestrian with tea, coffee, cocoa and hot water on the penny-in-the-slot system. The rumors were true, and the new hot water lamp is an established fact, as anyone who chooses to make a journey to Queen's buildings, South Wark-bidge road, may verify. The lamp, as shown in our sketch, looks somewhat like an overgrown gas lamp standing on a square base, which is really a tank containing some fifty gallons of water. This latter is supplied from the street main by a small pipe, which, curling through the already warmed water in the main tank, runs up the lamp-post and passes in a spiral of many swirls round and round three great gas flames. The heat turns it into steam, which, confined at a pressure of thirty pounds to the square inch, becomes superheated, and, passing downwards, keeps the water in a small tank above the main one always boiling. From the upper tank the steam passes to the main one, which it keeps at a temperature just below boiling point, and from which the smaller boiling tank is kept supplied. A halfpenny put into the slot at the side releases a spring and enables a handle to be pulled over, whereupon the boiling water runs from a spout in any quantity up to a gallon the purchaser may require. At present only the hot water is on tap; a little later compartments in the square pedestal will be filled with tablets of compressed tea, cocoa, etc. Cups will be attached to the base, and then anybody who wants a cup of tea or cocoa will put his penny in the slot, draw a compressed packet from the drawer, drop it into the cup, turn on the boiling water by means of another halfpenny, and enjoy the cup that cheers at any hour of the night or day. The idea, which is being run by a syndicate has caught on in Queen's buildings, and when our representative visited it on Good Friday mornings of hot water were very much in demand. In such a crowded neighborhood the boon is evident, and, as one lady remarked, "The lamp's all right. It gives no end of a light, and you get your water boiling for her halfpenny, and don't you forget it." The children have also taken kindly to the novelty, and crowd around chinking with delight as the water streams from the tap. Even the policeman is rubbing his hands in anticipation. "When the tea and cocoa and the cups are there we shall be good customers, sir. It'll be quite a treat when we're on night duty to get to one of those lamps for a warm up and a refresher." From all this it is evident that the hot-water street lamp has arrived at the right moment.

The Colonies. Eight nations of Europe possess colonies greater than themselves in extent of territory, says the Lewiston Journal, and four of them—Great Britain, France, Holland and Portugal—have more inhabitants in their outlying possessions than they have at home. As a colonizer, of course, England stands easily first, both for acquired land and for its population. Her little fragment of Europe contains less than 121,000 square miles, and lodges only 40,000,000 people, but she governs besides almost 17,000,000 square miles of good dry land—nobody could figure out how much water she controls—and makes laws for 322,000,000. France to her own 204,000 square miles and 38,500,000 citizens has added 2,505,000 square miles and 44,000,000 subjects. Germany, slightly larger and considerably more populous than France, has colonies that, including Kiaoo-Chan, aggregate 1,615,000 square miles and 7,500,000 people. Little Portugal holds a precarious title to 809,000 square miles of alien land and industriously teaches official corruption and industrial incompetency to more than 10,000,000 barbarians. Holland has joined 788,000 square miles to her own 12,800 and has no trouble to speak of in administering the affairs—and property—of more than 34,000,000 thinly clad Orientals.

The Eyes See Two Objects at Once. The two eyes really see two objects. If the two forefingers be held, one at the distance of one foot, the other two feet in front of the eyes, and the former be looked at, two phantoms of the latter will be observed, one on each side. If the latter finger be regarded, two phantoms of the nearer finger will be observed mounting upward, one on either side.
