Mrs. Thomas Maloney and Miss Maloney of Pittston are visiting in this city.

Miss Franc Costello, who recently graduated from the Erie County Hospital Training school for nurses, arrived home last week.

Friends of Miss Mame Gallagher will be pleased to learn she is convalescing from her recent critical illness.

The funeral of Jeremiah Hannifen who died Thursday, Nov. 3d, was held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock from his late home on East Washington avenue, and at 10 o'clock from SS. Peter and Paul church. The members of the different divisions of the A. O. H. and C. M. B. A. attended the funeral in a body. A solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Long, assisted by Rev. Fathers Lee and Maley.

The bearers were M. T. Sullivan, John Toomey and Lawrence Murray, representing the C. M. B. A., and John Gallivan, Peter Lyons and Patrick Battersby, representing the A. O. H. The interment was in SS. Peter and Paul's cemetery.

St. Mary's fair, which terminates Saturday evening, has been a gratifying success to the beloved pastor, Rev. Father O'Dwyer, and his faithful followers. The attendance each night has been large. Sunday evening's sacred concert bringing out a magnificent audience. The program on this occasion was of unusual merit, especially good work being done in the rendition of Gounod's "Santus," which was performed by the combined choirs of the city, directed by J. Moore Delo.

Last Sunday morning at 7 o'clock occurred the death of Dennis Leary at his home in Southport. Deceased had long been afflicted with paralysis. The funeral was held from the residence of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Leary, and from St. Mary's church, interment being in SS. Peter and Paul's cemetery.

The grim destroyer, death, has reaped a harvest in our city during the past week, the demise of Miss Adelaide Carmody being one of the most touching. Miss Carmody was 27 years of age, and death resulted from consumption. The funeral was held from her late home on Johnson st. Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, and afterward from St. Patrick's church. Interment in SS. Peter and Paul's cemetery.

At the theatres this week strong attractions have delighted large audiences. The Lyceum was graced on election night by Home's beautiful comedy drama, "Shore Acres," which certainly is one of the purest and best plays ever written, and deserves all the good things that can be said of it.

Thursday evening the cycling champion, Eddie Bald, appeared in "A Twig of Laurel." The new play for stage honors has been surrounded by a capable company, lavish appointments and interesting drama, the climax of course being the great bicycle race, in which the star carries off honors.

Saturday afternoon and evening the original Stetson "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company occupy the boards.

At the Globe the Nugent stock company are appearing in repertoire.

The A. O. H. will hold their annual ball at Bundry hall Thanksgiving eve.

Another death in our midst the past week was that of Mrs. Timothy Connelly, which occurred at her home on Pennsylvania avenue, Sunday morning, after a brief illness.

The funeral was held Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock from the family home, and after a service at St. Mary's church. During the church services Miss Helen Ryan sang "Calvary" in a beautifully sympathetic manner. The burial was in SS. Peter and Paul's cemetery.

Thomas Fennell, the well-known Elmira athlete, is hard at work coaching the Cornell "pigskin chasers" for their Thanks, giving battle against Pennsylvania.

James Cook of this city was united in marriage to Miss Winifred Monahan of Ithaca, on Monday afternoon, the ceremony being performed at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Thomas, the 14 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cahill of Brady street, died Monday after a brief illness, from peritonitis. The funeral was held Wednesday morning from St. Mary's church, a choir of young singers, friends of the deceased, rendering appropriate music under the direction of the Sisters of St. Joseph. Interment was in SS. Peter and Paul's cemetery.

Albert Conley was in Elmira last week. Mrs. John S. Kennedy visited her parents in Buffalo last week.

Miss Margaret Foley attended a party given last week in Elmira, by Miss Ryan. Miss Elizabeth Maloney visited friends in Elmira, on Saturday.

On Saturday morning occurred the death of Mrs. Margaret Collins of West First street, aged 63 years. She had resided here but a short time having moved here from Galton, Pa., about two weeks ago. Death was the result of typhoid pneumonia. Deceased was a sister of Mrs. Bridget Nolan and Mrs. Kate Sullivan of this city. She leaves five children, viz: Margaret, wife of Joseph Green, of this city; Mary Collins of Ulysses, Pa.; Hannah, John and Daniel of Corning. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church, Monday morning, and was largely attended. Mrs. Collins was a very estimable Christian and woman and her death is a source of sorrow to all who know her. Following were the pall-bearers: Thos. McGovern, John Kelly, Dan Sullivan, John Deneen, Wm. McMahon, Luke Reilly.

On Sunday occurred the funeral of the late Patrick Elwood, from St. Mary's church. The bearers were John Donahue, John Walsh, Thos. Donnelly, Jas. Murphy, Wm. Murphy and John Ryan.

The dreadful misfortune of death was again felt on Monday when Lena, the wife of Maria Schneckeweger, passed away at her home on East Third avenue. She was 27 years of age and had been ill for some time.

On Tuesday occurred the funeral of the late Mrs. Mary J. Kelly, wife of John Kelly, who died last week. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning, and was largely attended. Mrs. Kelly was a very estimable Christian and woman and her death is a source of sorrow to all who know her.

Some people are always up and doing older people. The older a woman gets the more she worries about past years. Love and sensateness are feelings that beggar description. Patriotism is frequently used as a cloak by scheming politicians. Men are not necessarily big guns because they happen to be big bores. Before marriage a man swears to love, after marriage he loves to swear. Some people are naturally nervous, while others are troubled with prickly heat. The man who fails to lay up something for a rainy day always has to depend on his friends for an umbrella.

ITEMS OF INTEREST. The mignonnet is the natural flower of Spain. The screw of an Atlantic liner costs about $20,000. There are six schools in Ireland where Irish is taught. There are always 1,200,000 people afloat on the seas of the world. A railway guard says that the fastest trains are always the safest. Nearly one-fifth of the students at Swiss universities are women. The maintenance of the Sultan's harem costs Turkey about $15,000,000. Sixty languages are spoken in the empire governed by the Czar of Russia. In Brazil there are said to be 300 languages and dialects spoken by the Indians.

PHILOSOPHIC BREVITIES. It's an easy matter to master the grief of another. Borrowing may be a disease, but lending is insanity. Faith is not very plentiful, but the supply equals the demand. The microbe never bothers the man who is unaware of its existence. The man who is too lazy to stand up and tell the truth is apt to lie about it. Providence never makes a mistake, but it is hard to make some people believe it.

Handsome men, gifted, with good sense are equally as scarce as pretty clever women. One woman always pays more attention to what another woman has on than to what she says. The leather sling used by a boy to throw stones is less dangerous than the gun-sling in the hands of his father.

ARE THEY SUPERSTITIOUS? Motormen and Grippmen Have Grave Fears of Running Over Any Animal. "I wonder," said an observer, "whether motormen and grippmen are superstitious, or whether it is dangerous to run a car over even small creatures, or whether the men are simply gentle-hearted and humane and loath to hurt anybody or anything?"

"Coming in from the country a while ago on a trolley car, and coming like chain lightning, too, we saw some chickens ahead on the track. The motorman shut her off and put the brake on with celerity and strength that indicated that he would have reversed the car if he could. It was clear that he didn't want to touch a chick, and we didn't. The birds ran across the track with wings a-flapping and their feet a-going as fast as they could make 'em. They didn't have much margin of safety, but they had enough, and as they flopped across, the motorman gave the car the wire again and let her hum."

"Coming down town on a Broadway motor car, the other night, I felt the grip as we were rounding the curve into Seventh avenue from Fifty-third street. An entirely new experience for that curve is taken with a running start to get around and down to where they want to go, and I knew they wouldn't shut her off there, unless there was very good reason for it. I looked ahead expecting to see a very large man, at least, or some other equally impressive object on the track, but it was just a dog, and not a very big dog either, a black and white shaggy dog trotting across the track and just clearing it—trotting along pastily, not hurrying a bit, but taking its time to cross over."

"And the grippman was as careful to keep clear of the dog as the motorman had been of the chickens."

His Warning Light. He was an aged man, with a full and sweeping beard. His face was deeply seamed with wrinkles, and he tottered as he walked. In his hand he bore an ancient lantern, and this it was that attracted the attention of a passer-by. The passer-by was a young man, and as he faced the aged stranger he took off his hat.

"Pardon me, sir," he said, "but isn't it rather unusual to carry a lighted lantern through the streets in the daytime?"

The old man looked up from the cavernous depths of his eye-sockets, and softly chuckled. "Don't you know me?" he cried in a high, cracked voice. A sudden light seemed to illuminate the young man's memory. "Bless my soul!" he cried, "it must be Mr. Diogenes!" "I thought you'd remember me," chuckled the old man. "Of course, I remember you now."

said the young man, and they shook hands warmly. "Still on the same old quest, I see," said the youth, as he pointed to the "What's that?" cried the old man with his hand to his ear. "I say I notice that you are still looking for an honest man," shouted the youth. Diogenes laughed long and heartily. "You're wrong," he cracked; "I gave that up long ago." "Then what," cried the youth with a mighty effort, "are you carrying—the lighted lantern—for?" "What am I carrying it for?" echoed the ancient philosopher. "I'm carrying it so these ding-blasted bicycle scorchers won't run into me! That's what 'im carry'n' it for. Vale, my boy, vale." And he hobbled along with his warning light. Pointed Paragraphs. Much of the experience a man gets comes too late to benefit him. To the victors belongs the privilege of fighting over the spoils. Down in front a young man's first attempt at mystic culture. No person enjoys drinking in a conversation of the extra dry brand. When the acts are long drawn out it's quite a distance between drinks. Some clubs cause scolding wives and some scolding wives cause clubs. The judgment of Solomon was great, but he never tried to umpire a baseball game. Many a boy who runs away to join a circus is only too glad to walk back some again. The gas meter's claim to the champion lar'f medal is disputed by the bicycle cyclistometer. The first thing a man does after making a fool of himself is to try to explain how it happened. Before marriage a man declares himself unworthy of his sweetheart's love and after marriage he spends about two-thirds of his time in proving it. Warmest Meal on Record. The warmest meal on record on Puget Sound was eaten near Buena, on the east shore of the sound between Tacoma and Seattle. The feaster was a member of the Bruin family and beehives loaded with honey and living, stinger-loaded honey-makers was the bill of fare. Mr. Bruin was not at all backward in helping himself, and when the feast was done he had swallowed the honey and bees of one hive and part of those of a second. He left nothing to tell the tale except his footprints on the sand, the partially demolished hive and the home and remainder of the household, together with the doctor, who is busy explaining how it happened and congratulating himself upon his fortunate escape.
