FUNERAL OF MARTIN J. CALLIHAN

When the news went forth last week that Martin J. Callihan was dead, sorrow rippled in very many homes in this city and his demise was mourned by thousands as was attested by the large number of friends who visited the family home on Jones street. The funeral services which filled two large rooms were beautiful and consisted of many places. The funeral took place Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

The cortege consisted of a detail of police under command of Captain McDermott and the Lieutenants of the various precincts. The Knights of Columbus were also in the procession.

Never saw with the possible exception of the jubilee exercises, has the Cathedral held a greater throng of people. But despite its vast capacity many hundreds of men and women were unable even to gain a glimpse of the interior of the church, standing without the edifice throughout the service.

Solemn requiem mass was sung. Rev. Thomas F. Hickey, rector of the Cathedral, acted as celebrant, assisted by Rev. James P. Kiernan, rector of St. Mary's who acted as sub-deacon, and Rev. Mgr. DeKaye, Chancellor of the diocese, as deacon. Rev. A. A. Hughes acted as master of ceremonies.

Seats in the center aisle had been reserved and these were occupied by the Knights of Columbus to the number of 125, representatives from the C. M. E. A. and C. B. A. Ancient Order of Hibernians, Improved Order of Redmen, the Martin J. Callihan Association and other bodies of which Alderman Callihan had been an active member. The Common Council, Board of Education and Board of Supervisors were also represented and the great majority of the city officials were present together with Mr. Callihan's associates in the Federal Building.

In the extreme front of the church were seated Mr. Callihan's family, including Mrs. Friedville of Bay City, Mich., a sister of Mr. Callihan, and Mrs. Callihan's brother, Austin O'Grady of Buffalo, and his wife.

At the close of the celebration of the mass, which was sung by the Polychromatic chorale with the responses by the Cathedral choir under the direction of Professor Eugene Benn, Bishop McQuaid pronounced the last absolution. As the body was borne from the church the choir sang Cardinal Newman's beautiful hymn: "Lead, Kindly Light."

A very long line of carriages formed the cortege which went to Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, where the interment was made in the family plot.

All the societies of which Mr. Callihan was a member adopted suitable resolutions on his death.

THE ART OF SUBSTITUTING

One of the Cleverest Tricks Known to the Professional Swindler.

IT REQUIRES PATIENCE.

The Victim May Have Been Watched for Months Before He Is Fleeced.

The Case of Doctor Darlington, Who Was Robbed of a Satchel Containing $50,000 in Cash—Some Other Swindlers Whose Large Sums Have Been Secured by This Process.

"The art of substituting is perhaps one of the cleverest tricks of the profession," said a veteran thief-in-the-art, when approached concerning the case of Samuel Greenwood, president of the Coastville (Pa.) National Bank, who was robbed of a satchel containing bonds to the value of $10,000, while another grip was substituted in its place.

"Speaking of similar cases that have come to my notice," the detective continued, as he leaned back in his chair and took on a reminiscent air. "It is remarkable what clever devices the professional swindler will resort to in order to fasten on his intended prey. And yet, while the obtrusiveness of one's grip and the substituting of another may seem a difficult matter at first glance, nevertheless when you remember that the thief may have watched Mr. Greenwood for months, the thing becomes quite clear. He may have followed him from place to place, week out and week in. He becomes acquainted with the habits of his intended victim, and when the opportunity moment arrived, in the restaurant all he had to do was to place his empty grip where the satchel containing the valuables had been before."

"So much for that case. Let me tell you about another, much cleverer with the exception that the swindlers were apprehended afterward. About thirty years ago a great sensation was created when Doctor Darlington, president of the West Chester (Pa.) bank, was robbed of a satchel containing $50,000 in cash. He was on his way home from Philadelphia, seated in the rear of a road coach, with his feet on an old grip on the floor; the old gentleman thought himself and his treasure absolutely safe. But he did not know what was in store for him. In the seat in front of him sat a woman in black. By the way, it is nearly always a woman in black who is concerned in these swindling affairs. But be attentive."

"The lady, for she had all the appearance of a gentlewoman, was evidently distressed from a cough and vainly attempted to raise the window next to her. She kept lifting away, and still the window would not budge. This was too much for Doctor Darlington. Gallantly he got up from his seat, or rather released his foothold on his grip, while placing his knees on his seat. The scheme was not mature yet, however. The woman bore down on the window while apparently assisting in its raising, and this matter stood for a few minutes more. The moment for the work of the confederate had now arrived. Seated across the aisle one of the thieves swiftly pushed his own satchel under Doctor Darlington's seat, abstracted the full one, and the trick was done. The man was struck in a long cloak, which facilitated the operation, and when the old man sat down he felt secure in the fact that his feet once more touched a seat. At the next station the thief got off, and the woman was not suspected until long afterward, for Doctor Darlington never discovered his loss until he reached home. The men implicated were 'Tobacco Jack' and 'Happy Williams,' since convicted to long terms in the penitentiary. The woman, whose name I have forgotten, was also sent up."

"You can easily see how the trick was done," and here the superintendent showed, by the aid of some chairs and other paraphernalia, how Doctor Darlington was made the loser of a satchel worth $50,000.

"One of the foremost dangers to the service, who for obvious reasons desires his name withheld, told of another satchel robbery that differed in some respects from the one above. The spotted victim was despoiled of his grip as the train neared a station a distance away from the point of departure. A confederate was in waiting outside, and cunningly the stolen valise was passed to him, while the unsuspecting traveler did not discover his loss until some time afterward."

A striking illustration of the difference in the conditions of the working people of Europe and those of America is furnished by contrasting the steerage passengers who go West with those that go East on the big Atlantic steamers. Steamship agents say that on the westward voyage they are always compelled to use many gallons of disinfectants in the steerage. On the eastward voyage they use none. Emigrants from Europe to the United States are headed together like so many cattle, and live in a way that would disgrace noble animals. After two or three years in America, when they go back to their homes, they demand clean quarters and comfortable bunk and the use of a bathroom. When they go West they carry their belongings tied up in a handkerchief or jammed into a bag. When they go East they have a good trunk, and sometimes several of them.

The smallest locomotive ever made was seen at the Omaha exposition. Its height from the top of the stack to the rail is 25 inches, and the gauge is 12 1/2 inches. The cylinders are 2 1/2 inches; the boiler is 1 1/2 horse power, made of steel, and tested to 300 pounds pressure and will hold 24 gallons of water. The diameter of the driving wheel is 10 inches. The weight of the little engine is about 600 pounds and it will run on a rail three-quarters of an inch square. It will draw 15 cars, each containing two persons.
