CASSIDY AND MUELLER FALL OUT OVER MULRANEY'S AMMUNITION.

One of the Miney Incidents of the Santiago Campaign of Which Historians Will Make No Mention-shows the American Soldier's Indifference to Surroundings.

The quarrel grew out of a mere matter of ammunition-some two hundred rounds of cartridges issued the night before to Private Cassidy of Company E, Sixteenth United States Infantry. Private Cassidy took his place in the trenches early in the morning, or, to be more accurate, rose from his bed in the mud and water and began working his Krag-Jorgensen as soon as he could see through his sights. ## KISSED THE SHELLS FOR LUCK.

In Account of Why There Was a Delay in the Brookirn's Ammonition Room

Much has been written about the action of men in the fleet during the battle of Santiago. One story of the action of the Brooklyn's crew was told the other day that illustrates the way the men below decks work during bat-in the ammunition-room of the Brooklyn they were stripped to the buff. There must be nothing in the magazine that is liable to cause friction and a spark. The men could hear the shots of the Spaniards and knew that the ship was struck. They could hear the roar of their own guns, but could not see anything.

When the 6-inch guns were working at their hottest and the men were passing shells to the hoist there was a slight pause. Then the shells came on deck regularly again.

Nben the engagement was ended and the stary naked gang came on deck to we the Cristobal Colon's anish, somebody asked: "What was that wait about?"

"Oh. those Indians," said Lee, a petty officer. "After they had greased the nose of the shell somebody said everyhody must kiss it for luck, and we did That caused the wait of half a minute. After that they kissed every shell.'

After the first few shots no shell left that room in the fight without the gang hugging it, telling it to go out and do its work. The crowd talked to the shells as if they were hnman.

It was: "Go up and do them?" "Get up there, old 6-inch, and plug a hole in her! Remember the Maine!" The 6-inch shells of the Brooklyn did great work. The boys, believe it was the send-off they got in the ammunition-room that helped to do it.

Here is a story told of Patrick O'Mara, a private in the Ninth Regulars. Not long ago he went to the colonel, who was a severe disciplinarian, for a two-weeks' leave of ab sence.

"Well," said the Colonel, "what do you want a two weeks' furlough for?" Patrick answered "Me wolfe is very sick, and the children are not well, and if ye didn't mind, she would like to have me home for a few weeks to give her a bit of assistance." the Colonel eyed him for a few minutes and said "Patrick, I might grant your request, but I got a letter from your wife this morning saying that she didn't want you home, that you are a nuisance, and raised the devil whenever you were there. She hopes I won't let you have any more furloughs.' "That settles it. I suppose I can't get the furlough, then?" said Pat. 'No; I'm afraid not, Patrick. It wouldn't be well for me to do so under the circumstances' It was Patrick's turn now to eye the colonel, as he started for the door. Stopping suddenly, he said: "Colonel, can I say something to vez?" "Certainly, Patrick; what is it?" "You won't get mad, Colonel, if I

Tom, the Maine Cat. Almost everybody has heard of "Tom," the cat that was found on the superstructure of the Maine after the explosion, says Mrs. Charles D. Sigebee. Tom was wounded in one foot, and was doubtless feeling very blue ndeed, with his favorite sleeping place destroyed, no friendly hands to minister to his wants, and nothing but water and ruln on every side! How glad he must have been to hear a voice that he knew, and to be taken on board the United States steamer Fern, in Havana harbor! A few days after, he was placed upon a chair to have his picture taken. This chair was a large wicker arm-chair which was saved from the wreck of the Maine. Tom sat in it, and tried to look pleasant, as the photographer told him. He felt peaceful, his foot was well, he had just eaten his favorite meal of fish, and the first pose was a success. second was attempted. Tom was almost asleep, and looking very happy, when Bruiser, the Fern's dog-a big, rough fellow with a loud bark and sharp white teeth—came pear. Tom arched his back like a contortionist at a circus. His tail swelled, and the fur stood out till he seemed twice his natural size; and so the second picture was taken. Tom was quite a navy cat. He was brought on board the Maine by an officer who toos him from the United States steamer Minnesota, where he had been I don't know how long. If Tom is still on shipboard, he must feel very frightened when the big guns are nred, and I fear his tail will become permanently large, and his back a continual bow! However, Bruiser left the United States steamer Fern after a while, and appeared on board the St. Paul, at Philadelphia. He was a plucky, lively fellow, full of fun, and no respector of persons. He would just as soon rush into the captain's cabin as into the galley. Poor Bruiser! He was only a cur, although, while he was a puppy, he concealed his plebeian pedigree. In a short time, however, he showed his cur-like qualities, and was sent on shore.
