maculate Conception the concert will be by the members of the choir of that church. At Washington Hall the members of St. Mary's church choir will provide the concert. Those who go to St. Joseph's Hall will have the pleasure of hearing the choir of St. Bridget's church, while at our own hall a very enjoyable evening is promised. For the drama, "A Celebrated Case," is being very carefully rehearsed by local talent.

The annual retreat for the men of the Cathedral parish will begin on the evening of Passion Sunday (two weeks from tomorrow). The retreat will be preached by one of the Jesuit Fathers.

T. MICHAEL'S.

The ladies of St. Michael's parish are at present at work to raise $300 for an altar to be dedicated to "The Holy Mother of Sorrows." The altar will be put up in the church and will be a memorial to the late pastor, Rev. Fridolin Pascalar, who recently died at Unter Marchthal, Wurtemberg, Germany.

LECTURE ON O'CONNELL.

Rev. A. M. O'Neill, rector of Immaculate Conception Church, gave a lecture on "Daniel O'Connell, the Irish Patriot," before the John Club on Tuesday evening. Father O'Neill is an interesting speaker and held the close attention of his large audience throughout his address.

The speaker showed the condition of Ireland when O'Connell returned after completing his education in France. He told how the great leader overcame opposition and organized the various factions into one complete body. He spoke of his oratory, which gave him command over the masses of the people. His brilliant career in the House of Commons, which he brought to a triumph by obtaining religious freedom for his race, was briefly yet happily sketched. The lecture concluded with a touching word-picture of the aged patriot pleading before Parliament for relief from the famine caused by the greed and oppression of his country's oppressor.

After the lecture Miss Agnes Madden rendered some Irish selections on the piano, which was greatly enjoyed, and Thomas Burns sang "Ye Mariners," in a most acceptable manner. Miss Katherine Burns gave some clever recitation and Charles Lane sang "The Palms."

LOVELY IRELAND FAR AWAY.

Forever dear to me must be
My little isle beyond the sea;
Her leek green fields and sunny strand
Her vales and streams by soft winds fann'd.

In evening's gleam,
I sit and dream
Of lovely Ireland far away.
Before the wrinkles seared my brow,
One Sabbath eve I made a vow,—
Where'er I wandered over earth,
To love the land that gave me birth.

In evening's gleam,
I sit and dream,
Of lovely Ireland far away.
America, home of the free,
A loyal heart I keep for thee;
But yet, at times, I long to see
My fairy haunts of infancy.

In evening's gleam,
I sit and dream,
Of lovely Ireland far away.
I often watch the ocean wave
Roll free, my Irish coast to lave,
And wish that it might waft me there,—
No other clime is half so fair.

In evening's gleam,
I sit and dream,
Of lovely Ireland far away.
Accept, my dear land, thy exile's prayer:
May thy approaching years be fair;
May Freedom, Love, and Peace
A living wreath entwine for thee.

In evening's gleam,
I sit and dream,
Of lovely Ireland far away.

EMMETT'S DAY.

The Anniversary of the Birth of the Noble Martyr-Patriot, Robert Emmet.

The 4th of March will be the one hundred and twenty-first anniversary of the birth of that noble young martyr-patriot, Robert Emmet. The young hero was the son of Dr. Robert Emmet, a prominent and skillful physician of Dublin. The eventful days of his short life are as follows: Born March 4, 1778. Expelled from Trinity College, Dublin, on account of his patriotic speeches in a college society, February, 1798. An exile in France with many other Irish refugees, in conference with Napoleon I., he was assured of assistance by him when war would occur between France and England. In 1802 Emmet returned to Dublin and set about organizing the patriots, and in manufacturing arms and munitions of war. May, 1803, the war between France and England broke out and raised high hopes in Ireland. As prematurely arranged, on the 22nd of July, 1803, the uprising took place in Dublin; but only about one hundred armed men responded to the call of Emmet. Even this force melted away before the Castle was reached, and no attack was made on the government. Lord Kilwarden, Chief Justice, and Rev. Mr. Wolfe, who unfortunately happened to be passing by in a carriage at the time, were killed by the unorganized crowd, notwithstanding the protests of Emmet. After the deplorable failure of the people to respond to the agreed signals of Emmet, he had many opportunities to escape, but lingered to take a last farewell of his betrothed, Sarah Curran.

On the 25th of August of the same year Emmet was arrested in the house of Mrs. Palmer, at Harold's Cross. The 19th of the following month he was brought to trial before Lord Norbury. The packed jury found him guilty without leaving their seats. When the verdict was rendered Emmet delivered that immortal speech which freed him from guilt in the eyes of all liberty-loving people, and which scored so fearlessly the accursed system of English government in Ireland. At 10 o'clock next evening (19th) he was sentenced to be executed the following day. About the hour of noon on the 20th of September, 1803, the sentence of the law was carried out, and the mortal life of a great young man ended. After Emmet was hanged his head was severed from his body and the executioner, while holding up the head by the hair, proclaimed the death of a "traitor!" Thus ended as noble a life as can be found in the history of any nation. Only twenty-five years old—and yet meeting his death without a tremor, but only regretting that he could do no more for his poor, oppressed and down-trodden country!

Though Emmet died eighty-eight years ago, his spirit still lives. The patriotic motives that lead him to do and die for Ireland is still uppermost in the breasts of hundreds of thousands of Irishmen, not only in Ireland but in every civilized nation.

He knocked down a dozen horses,
And without a sign of fear;
He wasn't a strong man either,
But he was an auctioneer.

SALUTES BETWEEN BOATS

Days When to Whistle Was Intended as an Insult.

In 1830 gongs for the engineroom were unknown, and in many of the boats when the pilot was in his house (if there was one) on deck over the engineroom, he would signal to the engineer by the strokes of a stick or cane upon the floor of the house or deck. All boats, of course, carried bells, and by them all notices of departure and of arriving were made known, and all salutes between boats were given by their bells. To blow steam, as is done now by a whistle, was intended to be a challenge of an insult.

In July, 1837, the first steam launch, the Sweetheart, 35 feet in length, 4 feet 3 inches of beam and 3 feet depth, engine 122 inches wheels 8 feet 6 inches in diameter and boiler horizontal fire-tubular, designed and constructed at the United States Navy-yard, New York by the writer, then chief engineer of the navy, was completed, and on her trial and succeeding trips around the city of New York, was saluted with the bells of passing steamboats and cheered by people who rushed to the ends of the piers to witness the novel sight. She attained a speed of 5.5 miles per hour. The engine was subsequently transferred to the United States Naval School at Annapolis.

Fuel, up to the year 1839, was wholly pine wood, though up to that time some owners of steamboats commenced experimenting upon the practicability of using anthracite coal. A Steamboat on her route of six or more hours could not have the capacity in her fireroom to contain all the wood required, and was compelled to pile it upon her side houses, and such boats as were on a long route, as from New York to Providence, were compelled to invade their upper deck with wood, and upon leaving the city had somewhat the semblance of a floating wood-yard.

In 1839 anthracite coal was introduced in the furnaces of the steamboat North America, plying on the Hudson River between New York and Albany, and to aid its combustion when a high pressure of steam was required, a fan-blower, driven by a belt from the wheel shaft, was resorted to, but soon afterward a small independent engine, was used, connected by a belt to the blower. Anthracite coal was soon afterward burned without auxiliary draught in the open furnace of a steam boiler.
