OUR PHILIPPINE COMMANDER: GEN. OTIS EARLY TRAINING.

It was the good fortune of the young Otis to receive his early training under one of the hest soldiers in our army at that time. This was Patrick H. O'Rorke, an Irishman by birth, whose parents were settled in Rochester, N. Y. When the One Hundred and Fortieth Regiment of New York Volunteer Infantry was mustered into the service at Rochester in September, 1862, O'Rorke, who was a graduate of the Military academy, was given command of it, and Otis, who had raised one of the companies (Company E.), was appointed captain of that company.

The regiment was composed of excellent material, and O'Rorke, whose made it one of the best-drilled and she bears a title, Mme. di Cessnola is
