Home is What a Mother Makes It. I might ask you. "What is it that makes a home" and you would answer, "A mother's love." You know what it would be to spend one of your Winter evenings in a room without a fire on the hearth or a carpet on the floor: even though with furniture and friends congenial, nothing could impart the lacking comfort or diffuse the wonted radiance. And in this Wintry world a tender mother's love, and a pious mother's care, are the carpet or the floor and the blaze on the hearth. Thy make he home; and to life's latest moment they mingle in every picture of pre-eminent happiness.

ELLEN BAWN.

Ellen Bawn, oh Ellen Bawn, you darling, darling dear, you, Sit awhile beside me here, I'll die unless I'm near you!

"Tis for you I'd swim the Suir and breast the Shannon's waters; For Ellen dear you've not your peer in Galway's blooming daughters!

Had I Limerick's gems and gold, at will to mete and measure. Were Loughrea's abundance mine, and all Portumna's treasure,

These might lure me, might insure many and many a new love. But oh! no bribe could pay your tribe for one like you, my true love!

Blessings be on Connaught! that's the place for sport and raking! Blessings too, my love, on a-sleeping and a-waking! I'd have met you, dearest Ellen, when the sun went under.

But, woe! the flooding Shannon broke across my path in thunder!

Ellen, I'd give all the deer in Limerick's parks and arbors. Aye, and all the ships that rode last year in Munster's harbors.

Could I blot from time the hour I first became your lover, For, oh! you've given my heart wound it never can recover!

Would to God that in the sod corpse to-night were laying, And the wild birds wheeling o'er it and the winds a-sighing.

Since your cruel mother and your kindred choose to sever wo hearts that love would blend in one forever and forever!

The constabulary inspector had information that any attempt of Mr. Scully to appear on the lands to deliver these missives would be resisted to bloodshed; but nothing could move him from his purpose. On the 11th of August he set forth at the head of a police escort and his own bailiffs to serve the ejectments. A signal halloo was passed along the fields as they were seen approaching, the houses were immediately abandoned, and men were seen running from far and near to swell the angry crowd. The abandonment of the houses allowed few notices to be served, but by this time the surrounding crowd had become so excited, groaning, cursing and threatening, that the officer in command of the police called on Mr. Scully to desist forthwith, and let them retreat in safety of the town, ere it was too late.

He reluctantly consented; but unwarned by what kad occurred, on the following Friday he was once more at the head of his force, and making a dash to surprise Ballycoohey. His approach was signalled as before, and a similar scene ensued, the people being rather more violent. The police had much difficulty in guarding Mr. Scully, and young Gorman, his land bailiff. At length the officer once more pointed out the madness of persevering, and said he would not be accountable for he consequences. The Ballycookey tragedy passed the Irish Land Act of 1870. Mr. Scully's despotism came to a critical moment to illustrate and exemplify the state of things under which the agricultural population of Ireland had long groaned. Every voice was raised against him. His brother landlords and magistrates, in meeting assembled, passed a resolution reprobating his conduct, and the coroner's jury, inquiring into the deaths of the murdered men, expressed a similar opinion. But Mr. Scully had the triumphant answer that he was within the law. There was no gainsaying this; so even from London journals there came the important ujoinder; such laws must
