AN ANIMALS' NERVE.

THEY HAVE BEEN GRAFTED TO MAN'S.

An Interesting Instance of this Transplantation—Out of a Score of Cases, One Recovered Entirely—Muscular Improved in Four Cases.

In a certain proportion of cases injuries to nerves the ends cannot be brought together and a portion of the nerve obtained from one of the lower animals or from an amputated limb has been implanted. Dr. R. Peters, of the Journal of the Medical Sciences, has published an analysis of the small number of previously recorded cases.

A man, aged 24, was severely injured in the right wrist by a circular saw. The ulnar artery and flexor tendons were severed. The latter were immediately sutured. He lost sensibility in the hand and later there were trophic changes: glossy skin, corrugated nails and ulceration of the skin, and marked atrophy of the small muscles. Five months after the injury the divided ends of the median nerve were exposed. They were found to be united by connective tissue. The proximal end formed a hard bulb. The connective tissue and the bulb were removed, leaving a gap. So much force was required to bring together the cut ends that transplantation of nerve was decided upon.

Four centimeters of the sciatic nerve of a young black hound were sutured between the ends with a kangaroo tendon. A similar operation was performed on the ulnar nerve. On the following day distinct return of sensibility in the thumb was found, the fingers could not be tested without disturbing the bandage. Two months after operation the skin had lost its shiny look and appeared normal and the muscles, though still atrophied, were regaining power. A month later sensibility was complete except on the dorsal surface of the third phalanges of the second, third and fourth fingers. The only anaesthetic areas on the palmar aspect were on the second and third phalanges of the third and fourth fingers and on the third phalanx of the second finger.

There are twenty recorded cases of transplantation of nerves. The median nerve was operated on in seven cases, the ulnar in three, the musculospiral nerve in seven, and the sciatic in one. There were eight primary and twelve secondary operations. The time from the injury to the operation varied from forty-eight hours to one and a quarter years. Eight out of the twelve cases of secondary operation showed improvement in sensibility or motion, while only four out of eight cases of primary operation improved. The interval between the ends of the divided nerves varied from three to ten centimetres, but distance did not seem to affect the result. In nine cases the transplanted segments were from the sciatic nerves of dogs, in three from rabbits, in one from a kitten, in one from the spinal cord of a rabbit, and in five from recently amputated limbs. In one case an inch of the sciatic nerve which had been excised was itself transplanted. In nine cases catgut was used to unite the implanted segments to the divided ends, in three silk, and in one kangaroo tendon.

No case recovered entirely. The nearest approach to complete recovery took place in the case longest under observation, in which at the end of six years sensibility had entirely returned and the only weak muscle was the abductor pollicis. In three cases there was practically recovery of sensibility and motion and the hand was useful. Sensibility completely returned in four cases, nearly completely in three cases, and was improved in four cases. Muscular power improved in four cases. There was improvement in either motion or sensibility in twelve cases, and no improvement in either in six cases. The average time in which sensibility appeared after the operation was about ten days; motion returned in about two and a half months.

Women Who Never Speak. The severity of the Bernardines of Anglet, Sisters of St. Bernard, most resembles that of the famous Trappist monks. The nuns take a vow of perpetual silence. The monastery is situated in the southwest corner of France, on the borders of Spain, and under the shadow of the Pyrenees. It was founded by the Abbe Cestae. Every hour of the day is carefully mapped out. Each time the big clock of the monastery chimes the hour, every nun falls on her knees and spends a few moments in prayer. Out in the fields it is marvelous to see how well the oxen know these chimes—directly they hear them they stop instinctively, starting on their way again the instant the chimes rise from their knees. The Bernardines have no fear of death. Indeed, on the contrary, they long for it. When the first superior of their order lay dying, she had an interview with one of the nuns, who implored her to intercede on her behalf in heaven that she too might die soon. The superior smiled and in an inspired voice said that in a month her request should be granted. On the day of the burial, just as the coffin was to be closed, the nun drew near the body, whispered in its ear, and slipped a note into the dead hand, imploring the superior not to forget her promise. Just a month from that date the nun, too, passed away, and so the promise was fulfilled. LIVING WITHOUT A STOMACH

Only Two Cases of Total Extirpation on Record.

The total extirpation of the stomach is an operation that has been performed only twice in the annals of surgery. Prof. Kocher, the celebrated surgeon, performed the second operation last Friday, in his hospital here. The first case was accomplished in San Francisco. Prof. Kocher's operation was upon a woman 40 years old, who had been suffering from carcinoma, or hard cancer of the stomach for some time.

On opening the abdominal cavity it was found that the case was favorable for a complete removal of the stomach. Kocher, because of the slight extent to which the lymphatic system was involved, transplanted the nerves to the esophagus and the duodenum was then removed and an anastomosis, or union, was made between them. Great care was taken not to interfere with the circulation of the intestines. The operation was completed without accident. Until the fourth day after the operation the patient seemed well, without any apparent cause, she died.

An autopsy was held yesterday. It was found that in spite of the great care taken to preserve the nutrition of the intestines there was a small area of necrosis in the transverse colon. In terms, dead tissue in the large intestine. That was enough to set up a peritonitis, which in the extreme stage had emaciated condition of the abdomen, caused her death. It was found, however, that the esophagus and duodenum, which had been healed, were almost entirely healed by Kocher's operation. Involving the partial removal of the stomach, his patient was a woman, who lived a year and half after the treatment.

Hold Your Breath and You'll Sleep. A prominent New York physician, himself a sufferer from insomnia for many years has discovered a brand new way of cutting one's self to sleep almost instantaneously. It has worked well in his own case, and never failed in twenty trials he has made upon his patients.

After taking deep inspiration the breath is held until positive discomfort is felt. It then let gently out. The process is repeated a second and a third time. At this is as a rule sufficient to obtain sleep. The mind must be fixed upon the experiment and one's thoughts must be allowed to wander.

Insomnia is caused by two kinds of cerebral activity directly opposite in nature, a too live cerebral circulation and an instant cessation of circulation. The former can easily be recognized from a throbbing and pulsating of the arteries. The self hypnosis of the patient causes a flow of nervous blood to the brain and an increase of the uronic acid and waste products to decomposition. These products, carried to the brain by the blood, overwhelm its centers and so produce sleep.

Dr. Johann Mehl-Ritz a German physician, writes enthusiastically about the effect of sleeping with the head low as a means of obtaining the most refreshing slumber. He raises the foot of the bed so that it forms an inclined plane. He says that the sleep thus obtained is more beneficial; that one awakens with a clear head, a wider horizon. He says that the neck increases in size that the influence upon the lungs is great that it can lessen the tendency to consumption. He recommends that the lowering of the head be done gradually, and says that insomnia often is cured by sleeping with the head too high.

President Sam of Haiti. It is far less easy to get to be president of Haiti than to Mr. McKinley, of the White House. The presidential palace in the Champ de Mars, surrounded by its little park, enclosed by a tall iron grating, with lookout boxes at the angles, a large and strong military barracks at the rear, and a field cannon posted here and there, could stand a considerable siege, and with a faithful garrison would be proof against almost any mob attack.

There is no end of etiquette involved in the approach to Son Excellence, yet I was favored with fortunate opportunities for seeing Mr. Simon Sam, tall and massive, with an immense paunch, and features and hue that are typically African, as you gaze at him in his sumptuous uniform, gorgeous with gold lace and a brilliant silk scarf, you can not help picturing to your mind's eye his hypothetical appearance as a mid-African chief, with huge feathers in his topknot, only a rattle-headed clout about his loins, a nail-studded war club in one hand, and about him a band of dusky savages more naked than himself. Instead of these strutting gentlemen in tall hats and European clothes, and these other prancing gentlemen in gaudy trappings, with tinkling spurs and jingling swords.

President Sam, however, is not, as it appears thus far, a man to be personally feared. His selection was a compromise, and he is only the figure-head of the present oligarchy, posing as a moderate statesman, while in truth he is only a rather common-brained old soldier, who in state affairs he is almost entirely guided by his ministers. He is a member of the St. Victor, in charge of the foreign department, and T. de la Roche, of the department of the Interior, are probably the ablest.

In trying on her brother's clothes a Montana woman pulled the necktie too tight and was strangled.

Deacon Jones—Do you think it is right for people to go to sleep in church? Deacon Brown—Of course, it is, at least in our church. If it wasn't for you suppose Parson Dullidy would let them to sleep? Boston Transcript.

"Why don't you begin?" inquired the excited prize-fight patron. "The minister," said the manager, hoarsely, "I don't see any here. You're not afraid of them, are you?" "Not afraid! Why, they'd never forgive me if I started this show up before they see here. They want to see the whole business."—Washington Star.

"The minister," observed the church member, as if the idea had just occurred to him, "can take a vacation, but satan never takes a vacation." "True," replied the other church member, "but satan can stand the heat a lot better than the minister."—Punch.

Finesse—She did not poison her husband, although he was seventy-three years old, while she was but eighteen. She was far too clever for that. Instead she kissed his brow, and asked him would he not, for her sake, try to live to be 100. Of course he could not refuse. The effort to live to be 100 was, at his advanced age, necessarily fatal; and the young wife came at once into all his property.—Detroit Journal.

The Holy synod of Russia has decreed that the insurance companies are not obliged to pay losses incurred during anti-Semitic riots. They did not say the companies are not to pay to Jews, but it is well known that in these riots the Jews only suffer loss, and so, by this measure, Jews alone are affected.

Sultan, a Newfoundland dog, has just died in France. He was noted for having arrested a thief, capturing an assassin, rescuing a child from drowning and saving a man who attempted suicide. The Society for the Protection of Animals presented him with a collar. Recently he prevented a cattle being robbed and was poisoned. It is supposed, by those who attempted the robbery.

In Cincinnati a man advertised his desire to sell a valuable secret for 50 cents. He stated that he would tell how he was cured of drinking, smoking, swearing, staying out at night, going to the races, gambling, and how he gained twenty pounds in weight in two years. Several persons sent him 50 cents each and here is the secret they received: "Just cured of all the bad habits named by an enforced residence for two years in the Ohio state prison."

The German government possesses several torpedo boats constructed of aluminum and it has equipped four army corps in all their metal accoutrements with aluminum, including cartridge boxes and cartridge cases, canteens, cups, sword handles, bayonet scabbards, the devices on the soldiers' helmets and the metal work of the stirrups and saddles. Even the buttons on their uniforms and the peas in their boots are constructed of the same light metal.

Lieutenant Eggers of the Darnaland police recently prevented an uprising of natives in a unique manner. The authorities had ordered the registration of all rifles in the possession of the natives and the latter feared that their guns were to be taken away. But the officer told them that their weapons were merely to be "vaccinated" and as they remembered the beneficial work of the veterinary surgeons during the great cattle plague they eagerly submitted the guns for vaccination against evil spirits.
