The motto or rule of life which says "always to be truthful and never to be afraid," is undoubtedly an excellent one, but it is not an easy one. He who thinks it is, let him little while and see what follows. Unless he be deaf and dumb, sorrow will come to him and life will be tinged with bitterness. But it is good to reflect that there are some things worth more than personal comfort.

Dancing is supposed to be the poetry of motion, and as such it ought to mean something more than mere mechanical correctness in keeping time with the music. This is true of all kinds of dances, but especially of the waltz. A couple of good dancers, engaged in the waltz, ought to be an inspiring sight, affecting the eyes of onlookers just as the music affects the ears. You could manufacture a wooden couple, run by clockwork or steam, and the wooden feet would tap the floor with absolute regularity and precision. But no one would call that good dancing. The best dancers are those whose every gesture seems permeated with the spirit of the music and full of grace and ease. These few remarks are made because there seems to be several persons in the town who are sadly deficient in knowledge of just what constitutes excellence in dancing. The writer is one of the most graceful dancers on earth and yet, on a recent occasion, when he condescended to favor the assembled multitude by gliding over the floor in a prize waltz, those who acted as judges did not know enough to give him the prize. O tempora! O mores!

Miss Louise Powers, of Bath, spent Sunday in this city visiting friends.

Man like it is to fall into sin
Fond-like it is to dwell therein.
Sain't like it is for sin to grieve,
God like it is all else to leave

To this verse might be added one to the effect that it is noble and brave and admirable to admit and acknowledge a fault when one has committed it. There is nothing cowardly in speaking words of regret and repentance; on the contrary, it sometimes takes courage and manhood of a rare sort to simply say, "I was wrong."

Francis McCarthy left early in the week for Pittsburg Pa., where he has accepted a position with the Westinghouse Company, of that place.

BAKER THEATRE.

"A Soldier of the Empire," is the work of a young American who has already proved himself a strong actor of the romantic school; he has a commanding presence, a powerful voice and an extremely graceful carriage. The play is intensely interesting, the story well told, the climax thrilling, the comedy element clean and highly amusing. Mr. Hall's company is composed of some of the brightest members of the profession, whose combined work in this play is not excelled by and similar organization in this country. It comes to the Baker Theatre, Rochester, the first half of next week. "McFadden's Row of Flats" come the latter half.

COOK OPERA HOUSE.

There were a great many people who went to New York to attend the grand turn-out in honor of Admiral Dewey; but there were a great many more who did not attend, and in order that all may see just what this enthusiastic nation did for its "savior heroes," the mighty motion machine, the Biograph, caught many of the most interesting scenes, and Manager Moore will show them at the Cook the coming week. One of the views show the Rochester companies just as they appeared in the parade.

The picture of the naval parade is excellent, and the one taken of the marines of the Atlantic fleet is also worthy of mention. The view of Dewey himself and the Rochester police will be held over another week.

The vaudeville features for the coming week are made up of just the jolliest kind of acts, and just the kind that makes you feel good all over after seeing. Clever Flo K. Irwin, assisted by Walter Hawley, in their witty sketch, "The Gay Miss Con," head the bill, while Charley Loder, the funny Dutch comedian; Wertz & Adair, the acrobats; M'le Irene, and her trained dog, Zara; Conkley & Huested, the dancing comedians; La Dazie, a bright soubrette, complete the olio. As usual, four complete performances will be given every day, and if you can't get your money's worth out of this attraction, you are very hard to please.

STORYETTES.

The following gems are from "Irish Life and Character," by Michael Maedonagh:

"Bad luck to them Afraideas," said a Dublin carman the other day when an officer handed him a shilling after driving from Richmond barracks to the Kildare Street Club. "Why?" asked the officer. "Sure they've killed all the gentlemen that was in the army." The officer was so pleased with the veiled insult that he doubled the fare.

An old gentleman was begged by his nephew to give up whiskey, as the abstinence would undoubtedly lengthen his days. The uncle wrote back: "My dear boy, I tried your advice for one day, and, upon my soul, you're right; it was the longest day I ever put in."

"Why are Irishmen always laying bare the wrongs of their country?" asked some one in the House. "Because they want them redressed," thundered Major O'Gorman.

Here is a good story, told by a nun in New Zealand. A protestant clergyman in Ireland met a good Irish woman, who was devoutly saying her beads. He asked her what she was doing, and on being told, inquired how the beads were said. Bridget explained "I says one Our Father and tin Hail Marys."

"Ah, Biddy," said the parson, "you should not do that. You should say ten Our Fathers and one Hail Mary."

"Faith, is that all you know about it?" came the quick response. "Sure one Our Father is worth the whole tin Hail Marys."

"At our house the other night we had a Methodist minister to tea," said a friend. "The Dominie said grace, and when he ceased asking the blessing the four-year-old daughter of the hostess, who sat opposite the minister, looked up and said: 'That's not the kind of grace my papa says.'"

"No? What kind of grace does your papa say?" asked the minister. "Why, he came home last night and when he sat down to the table he just said, 'Good God! what a supper.'"

There is more Catastroph in the season of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has pronounced Catastroph to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 20 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.
