AN OPEN CONFESSION-The Rev. Mr. Aked, of Liverpool, says the Glasgow Observer, is known HOLY CROSS (AUBCH, as one of the foremost Protestant ministers on Mersey's side. He is a promainent citizen of Liverpool and a wellknown public speaker distinguished by the fearless courage of an outspoken, yet temperate and responsible man. He has just been lecturing at Great Harwood, near Blackburn, on "The Story of the Pilgrim Fathers." and in the course of his lecture he tracel the genesis of the Protestant Reformation in England. These are Mr. Aked's paper printed in the locality where he lectured

"In this country the Protestant Reformation in its outward and official acts grew out of the adulterous pasion of a king for a pretty girl, and the whole course of the early stages of the novement, with its schisms, subterfuges, compromises and controversies might be traced to the fact that the origin of it was tainted The king was Henry VIII the girl Anne Boleyn; and because the Pope dolined to annul Henry's marriage with 'stherine, the monarch broke the power of the Pope in this land "

Speaking on Queen Mary Mr Aked ald "it was perfectly certain that ustice had not been done to her by English or Projestant historians 👘 Of Queen Elizabeth Mr Aked had also something to say. He declared "She was the greatest llar in Europe

A de to her was a mere intel'ectual means of escoping from a difficulty. She always lied, and the rage and tatters of her reputation as a woman were torn in pieces when Hume was allowed access to original documents. letters written by her to lovers and to other people." So much for the founder of Protestantism. Speaking of the religious change itself, Mr Aked said "In the matter of religion, it was not the nation that had swung from was a matter of kings and queens, courts and statesmen and statecraft' Mr. Aked is by no means a pro-Catholic: on the contrary, his attitude is militantly Evangelical, and he is a which makes these pronouncements the more significant. Catholic controversialists should store them by, such confessions by a Protestant minister are sure to prove useful.
