The church was handsomely decorated with yellow and white bunting, the papal colors, and sut flowers and potted plants in profusion. The musical part of the services was of a high order, the regular choir, under the direction of Frof. Kreschel, being assisted by Hebing's orchestra.

The celebrant of the mass was Rev. Frederick R. Rauber, and he was assisted by Rev. J. M. Hargather and Joseph Ruby as deacon and sub-deacen. The descons of honor were Revs. D. Laurenzis and S. "After many years of trial, and hardship and endurance the time had come when Father Rauber was to become a priest, an efferer up of the bacrifice of Calvary, a model of the people, to be with and for the people all day; their servant while their minister and their guide. What honor came to that young man on that day of his ordination ! He was raised up to stand at the altar and bring God from Heaven, that God might be there wershipped and the souls of the people be exalted. What a life was to be his ! What honor he might bring to himself, what honor to God's church and what comfort to the people 1

"What a holy and blessed life was to be his, handling sacred things and dealing in holy things. Otton, beloved brethren, you bear from this holy place words strong, brave, just and true, exalting the dignity of the priest. No one says too much and when all has been said there is still more to be said. It is hard for us to realize what is the nature and the character of the priesthood. When that priest knelt down before his bishop, the hely sacrament having been administered, the bishop takes the young man's hands, bands just annointed with hely cheism, in his and addresses him; 'Will thou promise reverence and obedience to me and my successor?' and the young man says: 'I will.' And the priest who finds that as years have gone by he has been faithful to his promise knows that he has been true to Ged. He may face his people and demand their faith and reverence. He can go out among his people and bear to them the message of eternal salvation. He feels himself in every mement what he was at that moment of his consecration to Ged's service.
