Mr. A. Herman, will call on subscribers on Auburn road this week.

Corning.

The death of Frank McGovern son of Mr. and Mrs. James McGovern of West Third street, on Thursday of last week occasioned unusual sorrow. He died after an illness of ten days, from an attack of peritonitis. He was a young man in the prime of life, being twenty-two years old, unusually well educated and intelligent. Since leaving Niagara University where he was a student some three years ago, he has been employed in "Tubell's pharmacy, and expected later to fit himself for a physician. Young, ambitious and gifted in many ways his sudden taking off is a source of poignant regret to all who knew him. The funeral on Sunday from St. Mary's church was attended by the Pritchard hose company of which the deceased was a member, in a body, and numerous other friends and relatives. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

T. J. O'Connell, who is studying medicine in New York, is home for the summer vacation.

Work on St. Mary's church continues to progress and when the tiling is completed we will have a noble edifice that will be a lasting monument to the fervor and true religious feeling of the Catholics of Corning.

Sunday excursions to Lake Keuka via Bath and Hammondsport will begin Sunday June 10th, and will continue throughout the summer. The fare for the round trip is one dollar and we would advise all those who have never "taken in" this little journey to try it. The lake is a charming stretch of water where breezes are always at play and the scenery is quite sufficiently attractive to fully and agreeably occupy one's mind and to drive away successfully all those considerations of past and future worries of all kinds.

The Spauldings will play the Hammondsport team on Tuesday of next week, and not Wednesday as, by an error we stated last week. The game will, no doubt, attract a crowd as the Spauldings, while they are not a professional team in the sense of being supported by the "fans" of the town, are young men of unusual skill at the national game and they place a high value upon discipline and persistent industry. They have already met and defeated the Hammondsport's strong team by a score of 12 to 11 at the city of grapes. The approaching contest will be watched with interest.

Practical jokers are not always without a sense of humor. One of them evinced from the inner recesses of his consciousness an idea of some originality which he proceeded to act upon promptly with the result that early visitors at the luncheon wagon were startled to see a placard hanging outside, having the legend, "Messias here." Needless to say it was removed by the wrathful proprietor as soon as his attention was called to it.

Many complimentary remarks were heard on Sunday evening on the rendering of "Nearer My God to Thee" by a quartette composed of members of St. Mary's choir, at the funeral of Frank McGovern. Several persons who heard it imagined that singers had been brought from heaven, but this was not so and the music was a voluntary as graceful as that of the choir of which the deceased was at one time a member.

Many Corningtons took advantage of the excursion rates on Decoration Day and left the city for various points of interest.

Hammondsport.

An unknown man was found in the Erie Railroad yard in this city Sunday having been run over with the cars, he was removed to St. James Mercy hospital where a few hours afterwards he died. He gave his name as Bonovan and resided at West Erie avenue, Corning, New York. The remains were taken to Daggon's undertaking rooms and word sent to the chief of police of Corning, who in answer to the telegram, stated that no such person resided at the address given. Mr. Daggon kept the body until Tuesday in hopes that some information as to who the victim was, could be received. Receiving none he was buried after being photographed.

Mr. Joseph McGovern has accepted a position with undertaker Daggon in this city.

The Polyhymnian Society of Rochester, will give a vocal and instrumental entertainment in Brandon hall, Monday evening, June 4th. The Polyhymnians have been heard before and are certain to draw a large crowd. A curfew has been erected and will go into effect in this village immediately. All children under 16 years of age must be off the streets after 7 o'clock unless accompanied by their parents or some older person. Five dollars fine is the penalty of an offense and a special officer has been appointed to enforce the law. It is believed that this new department will have a good effect as the habit which children have fallen into this town of running around the streets after dark without any restraint is an evil of which our townspeople are ashamed.

She is survived by her husband, a little daughter, three sisters, Mrs. Patrick Dwyer, Mrs. William Moore of Connecticut, Mrs. William Corrigan of Seneca Falls, and three brothers, Michael, Ferguson of Seneca Falls, and James and Joseph Ferguson of Connecticut. Novel and Instructive Features of the Great National Convention—Prairie Schooners Will be Seen in Abundance—A Popular Populist Delegate.

The most extraordinary spectacle in the history of great national conventions will be witnessed this year in connection with the gathering of the leaders of the democracy at Kansas City. A great number of the delegates to the convention, instead of going there in Pullman sleeping cars, or even in the ordinary day coaches, will start for Kansas City many days or weeks beforehand, and slowly travel their way across the country in old-fashioned "prairie schooners." Just as the "forty-niners" going to California after the discovery of gold fitted out wagons with beds, stoves and every "road necessity," so these delegates to the Kansas City Convention will stream across the prairie in canvas-covered wagons, many bearing on their sides delegates to a great party gathering for the nomination of a presidential candidate gone to a meeting place in such primitive style as this Andrew Jackson was nominated at a convention where there was a considerable affluence of simplicity but little real poverty. Many of the delegates rode there on horseback but these were gentlemen riding blooded animals, carrying silver flasks of old

PEN AND PAPER.

The objection made to the first gold pens manufactured was mainly to the points, which were so soft that they were bent or worn out very quickly.

The iron pen mentioned by Job in the book of that name in the Bible is supposed to have been a steel graver used for cutting inscriptions on stone.

Most copying inks are ferruginous in their nature, and are adapted for use by being highly gummed and having also a portion of sugar in their composition.

The Chinese pen from time immemorial has been a brush made of some soft hair and used to paint the curious, so-called letters of the Chinese alphabet.

The side sills in the pen are generally made by a hand lever machine, which sets the steel at the proper place, and thus insures greater flexibility in the pen.

The manuscripts of the fifth and twelfth centuries were written with very good black ink which has not shown the least signs of fading or obliteration.

Quill pens are prepared for use by soaking them, drying them in hot sand, scraping them so as to remove the outer sheath, then hardening them in diluted nitric acid.

Bamboo pens have been used in India for over 2,000 years. They are made like the ordinary quill pen, and for a few hours writing are said to be very serviceable.

Some chemists affirm that the ideal ink consists almost exclusively of gallic acid of iron, and that the nearer the liquid approaches this substance the more perfect the ink.

An indelible ink very commonly used in the Middle Ages was made with a basis of the tetrachloride of gold applied to a cloth dampened with a solution of chloride of tin.

The outgals used in the manufacture of ink contain gallic and tannic acids, together with mucilage and other elements supposed to be essential to the constitution of a perfect ink.

The parchments and papyrus used by the ancients seem to have had a special preparation by virtue of which they absorbed the ink and thus caused the writing to be almost indelible.
