Corning.

O the rumble and the jumble And the tintinabulations, And the squaking and the hawking And the blare and blarting tumult And the car-destroying uproar, Of the street fair that's in Corning.

I sigh for the eloquence of Demosthenes or the descriptive powers of Victor Hugo or R. Harding Davis, to do justice to the screet. fair that is just over. The town went mad for a week, and the intellect grows faint and the imagination recis at the thought of trying to adequately picture the state we have been in for the last few days. We are too close yet to the dazzling thing to review it dispassionately or with any kind of cool criticism and the recollection teams with such a confusion of sounds and sights and experiences that the result is chaos. When the bands, the dealening bands. gave us a breathing spell, an army of barkers and a host of hawkers and a car-load of s'eam pianos and hand-organs and orchestras, made sanity impossible. One's wild, distracted eyes, meanwhile were assailed by booths of glaring green and firey red and blinding yellow and a deluge of American flags and banners. Dimly one was conscious of walking-sticks and things that you toss | Thursday last. rings at, targets to shoot at, and wild anibreath, yes oh, yes, it was a success.
