On account of our increasing circulation we are obliged to go to press a day earlier than usual so our out-of-town reporters will mail their news on Monday so it will reach us by the first mail on Tuesday. Important items can be mailed a day later.

LYONS.

The marriage of Miss Ella Heller of this village to Mr. Louis Kessler, formerly of this village but now of Syracuse, was solemnized last week at St. Michael's church. Rev. D. W. Kavanaugh officiating. Miss Kate Heller acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Charles Kessler as best man. The happy couple left immediately after the marriage for their future home in Syracuse, where Mr. Kessler holds an important position.

Last Saturday morning at 11:30 the funeral of John F. Aspell, who died Wednesday night, took place. Death was caused by locomotor ataxia brought on by an injury which he received on the railroad a few years ago. Deceased was 45 years old and a well known and highly respected man. He is survived by a wife and two children. He was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and also of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, which latter society attended the funeral in a body.

Father Kavanaugh is considering a trip to Indian River, Florida, for the benefit of his health.

There is to become kind of an entertainment before Lent for the benefit of the church. What it will be is not known at present.

At the mass Sunday, prayers were offered for the repose of the soul of Martin Kelley.

AUBURN.

Branch No. 5, C. M. B. A. held their annual installation of officers last Thursday evening. Following the ceremony the spiritual adviser, Rev. J. J. Hickey, made a eloquent address. Caterer P. D. Conway served refreshments after which a musical program was rendered by some of Auburn's best local talent.

The funeral of Matthew Kelly of Seymour St. took place from St. Mary's church Monday morning. There was a large attendance of friends. Interment took place in St. Joseph cemetery.

Rev. Father Flynn of Banghamton, visited at the Holy Family rectory a few days last week.

The funeral of Master Joseph Holihan who accidentally shot himself while handling a revolver, took place from St. Aloysius church last Tuesday. Father McGraw was celebrant of the solemn high mass assisted by Father Roganboyan and Father Doran.

The Holy Family church choir rendered a portion of the Christmas music at the men's and women's prison last Sunday morning. It was well appreciated by the inmates and attendants.

Rev. J. W. E. Kelley spent last week in Ithaca.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine O'Hara of Delevan St. took place from St. Mary's church Tuesday morning and was largely attended. Rev. Father Doran said the mass and conducted the burial services. Interment took place in State street cemetery.

Daniel Moran of Lyons, was the guest of Auburn friends the early part of the week.

Mrs. Helen Montgomery of Rochester, addressed the public school teachers at the high school Monday evening last. The public was invited to be present. While in the city she was the guest of Mrs. William H. Sewall.

CALEDONIA.

Installation of officers of Council 14 took place Thursday evening, Jan. 15th. The new officers were installed by past chancellor John C. Maloy. Afterwards the members and their friends enjoyed a very pleasant evening dancing, a delicious lunch was served.

Mr. Thomas Ganey, wife and little daughter of Painesville, are spending a few weeks with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Ganey.

Miss Alice Shelley and Mr. Elisha Sherman of Shelby, were united in marriage Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Columba's rectory. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Gorminginger. Miss Kate Yopp of this place, and Mr. James Conroy of LeRoy, attended the couple. The bride is a bright and popular young lady and has always lived here and the best wishes of her Caledonia friends will follow her to her new home in LeRoy, after a short wedding journey.

NEWARK.

The L. C. B. A. ladies held a very enjoyable dancing party in Elliott's hall Thursday evening, Jan. 15.

Mrs. Thomas Cosgrove, who fell and sprained her ankle New Year's eve, is reported some better.

Expectations are that the new St. Michael's church will be finished about March first.

Miss Julia McGurn of Rochester, spent New Year's with friends here.

Miss Ella M. Carthy spent last week with friends in Lyons.

FATHER KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

The Greatest Satisfaction. 12

I have only used one-third bottle of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and acknowledge with greatest satisfaction that even this small quantity has done much good. My nerves now are not irritable or susceptible, am again up and can be about all day on my feet. The Tonic has done more good than all the medicines the doctors gave me.

John Wolff, Pastor.

Miss Carrie Conter writes from Kalamazoo, Wash., Feb. 17, 1902: One bottle of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured me of nervousness, from which I had suffered for years, and for which I had tried all kinds of medicines without relief.

"I'm sorry we're invited," observed Mrs. Edmonds to her husband as they dressed to go out. "We shan't have a good time."

"Why?" her husband inquired. "I always liked Ned."

"Yes," responded Mrs. Edmonds. "I like them both, but Will, try as hard as I may, they make me absurdly jealous."

Mr. Edmonds grew serious. "The old excuse, Grace. I thought you had outgrown that bad habit. We've got so much that you can never have. There!" he cried, pinching her cheek. "Let's put it aside. We have each other, while you know they quarrel. We must have them here some evening soon. You can stow while I juggle the chaffing dish. Ned Constable never could make a decent rabbit. His wife won't let him learn how."

Mrs. Edmonds sighed even at her husband's picture of a pleasant evening at home. "I shall depend upon you," she said as they rang the Constable doorbell, "to keep me contented tonight, Will."

It was quite an affair. Mr. and Mrs. Constable, whatever they might be when alone, were a charming host and hostess.

"How well they do it!" exclaimed Mrs. Edmonds to her husband as they sat eating. Then, with a dangerous tone in her voice, she said, "I wish, oh, so much, that you and I—"

"There, there," Edmonds broke in gently. "We're not going to speak of that, dearie. By Jove!" he ejaculated suddenly. "I do believe there's old Tom Goodwin over there all by himself. You remember Tom, don't you, Grace—the fellow who was too poor to come to our wedding and who said he was sending for his instead of buying a rail road ticket? I haven't seen him for months. He writes things, I believe. You must meet him, good old chap."

"Do you know," Goodwin remarked a few moments later, sending himself beside his new found friends, "I always promised myself the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Edmonds. And now," and his genial face beamed with good nature. "I see how true it is that unexpected pleasures are the keenest. Funny thing, Mrs. Edmonds, but I didn't want to come here at all."

At this Edmonds smiled at his wife. "Neither did we," now we are glad we did," he said. "But Tom, why haven't you called? You might have found us before this in the directory."

"Oh, yes," Tom rejoined, "but you're such dreadful swells I didn't dare. You see," he explained while Mrs. Edmonds tried to tell him how modest they really were. "I'm just beginning. When you just begin, people don't like you, and mostly you don't take to them, and so I have thought it best to keep away by myself until I had done some thing worth while."

Goodwin made himself very agreeable, and Mrs. Edmonds liked him. Her husband got deep in debate with the business acquaintance, and the two men presently drifted to the other side of the room, so when the music began in the conservatory Goodwin took Mrs. Edmonds up stairs.

"It's awfully good of you, you know," he said to her as they seated themselves next a dense mass of palms in the ballroom, "not to insist on dancing, but to talk to me. You're so cheerful and seem so contented. Will is a fortunate man, Mrs. Edmonds."

"How odd! I was discontented and blue when I came here tonight," she said, "all because I was—well, I was covetous."

Tom laughed. "We all got that way at times, I fancy," he remarked. "Look at those De Puysters standing over there, the richest people here. You wouldn't believe it, but they are ridiculously jealous of the Four Hundred. How the Four Hundred fare we never know, but the De Puysters ape them as far as they can, while some of us are silly enough to ape the De Puysters. I am glad you are not one of those."

that indeed she was one of them there came to her ear from behind the palms by which they sat the sound of voices. They both recognized the tones of their host and hostess. It was an awkward position, but they could not have escaped being seen from over the palms.

Constable was evidently remonstrating with his wife. "You can't mean to pretend," he was saying, "to be keeping pace with the De Puysters. One would think you were, to see us tonight. I tell you, Anne, I can't afford it, and that's flat."

"That's what you're always saying 'can't afford this, can't pay for that,'" cried Mrs. Constable, with considerable heat. "Why don't you go into bankruptcy and be done with it? You never used to complain."

"We would look well bankrupt, wouldn't we?" her spouse cut in. "I never used to complain, as you say, because I was getting rich fast then. It is changed now, and I'm often pinched for money to the verge of desperation. I've told you so, Anne. While I've no objection to your entertaining and having a good time, there's a limit to our means, you know, and where the devil the money for this is coming from I don't see."

"You never told me," cried Mrs. Constable. "You merely said you were worried. And I'll tell you right now, Ned Constable, I do intend keeping pace with the De Puysters and flatter myself I have done so."

"He stuck me on 'change for $12,000 last week," muttered Constable. "You may be able to keep up the pace, but, by thunder, I can't at that figure, Anne!"

There was a pause. Then he said patiently: "You go at it wrong, and, as your husband, I must correct you. Look at Will Edmonds and his wife. They are poor, as the world takes such people, but they are richer and happier than we are."

"Yes," exclaimed Mrs. Constable, "and live in a little place where you can hardly turn around and where you meet starved musicians, impudent actors or authors who hope to startle the world some day. Perhaps you would like to change places with them."

"I may have to," Constable murmured, "before it is all over. Come, Anne, the people are doing. We must get downstairs."

Goodwin and Mrs. Edmonds arose, he serious, she trembling.

"Tell me," he asked her, "should we have gone away?"

"Yes and no," she answered. "We couldn't without their knowing." Then, putting her hand in his as they came to Mr. Edmonds, she observed seriously: "A little while ago I was jealous of them. Mr. Goodwin. Now I am not, and my little place where you can hardly turn around seems sweet and good to me. Come and see us in it. We will welcome you, and you may get an idea how nice humility is. Good night. I thank you for being here."

The Gifts of the West.

The west gave to the world such types as the farmer Thomas Jefferson with his Declaration of Independence, his statute for religious toleration and his purchase of Louisiana. She gave us Andrew Jackson, that fierce Tennessee spirit who broke down the traditions of conservative rule, swept away the privacies and privileges of officialdom and, like a Gothic leader, opened the temple of the nation to the populace. She gave us Abraham Lincoln, whose gaunt frontier form and guarded, massive hand told of the conflict with the forest, whose grasp on the ax handle of the pioneer was no firmer than his grasp of the helm of the ship of state as it breasted the seas of civil war. She gave us the tragedy of the pioneer farmer as he marched daringly on to the conquest of the arid lands and met his first defeat by forces too strong to be dealt with under the old conditions. She has furnished to this new democracy her stores of mineral wealth that dwarf those of the old world and her provinces that in their selves are vaster and more productive than most of the nations of Europe. Out of her bounty has come a nation whose industrial competition alarms the old world and whose masters of her resources wield wealth and power stronger than the wealth and power of kings.—Frederick J. Turner in Atlantic.

A Fatal Game of Chess.

It is a Spanish tradition that the fate of Columbus overhung on a game of chess. For years the great navigator had haunted the Spanish court, trying to interest some one in his plans, but at last he determined to abandon the country and visit France. The night before his intended departure he sought an audience with the queen to communicate his intentions and to take his leave. The queen asked him to wait while she made another effort to interest the king. She found Ferdinand engaged at a game of chess, and disturbing him by her entrance caused him to lose a piece. Annoyed and irritated by the incident, the king, after rudely denouncing Columbus and his schemes, informed Isabella that the result of the game would depend on the result of the expedition. But the queen, overlooking the board, whispered to her august spouse a suggestion relative to a move that would be advantageous. The king followed the advice, the complexion of the game was quickly reversed and Columbus' dream of years was realized at last.

Uses of Salt.

Do you know that common salt, dampened, will remove the discoloration on cups and saucers which is the result of tea and coffee and careless washing? That it will take the egg stain from silver? That it will restore in great measure colors faded in washing or keep them from fading if used in the rinsing water? That nothing cleans China matting or willow furniture so well as a salt and water scrubbing with a scrubbing brush? That it is an excellent dentifrice? That if the chimney gets on fire salt put upon the fire will deaden the flame? And how many even old cooks know that when the grease from dripping fat on the coals is charring the steak they are broiling the trouble can be stopped by throwing a little salt on the fire?

Warring Birds.

An unwritten law of birddom seems to be that it is never worth while to resist an opponent who seems to be in deadly earnest unless you have reason to be in deadly earnest yourself. One result of this is that you often see large birds dying in apparent terror before angry small ones. A correspondent mentions having seen a mink thrush pursued by a crow, took by missile through the sparrowhawk by rook and missed through by wren. So that we have a circle which could be indefinitely expanded with intermediate gradations, showing how little logic there is in the warfare of wild birds.—Country Life.

A Bible Student.

A member of a Sunday school was one day asking some children questions on Bible knowledge. So far as he had gone the children did very well, but when asked: "Where does the word 'holy' first occur in the Bible?" the children could not answer for a minute or so till a sharp urchin stood up and said:

"Please, sir, on the cover."

How to Measure a River.

Anybody can measure approximately the breadth of a river without a surveyor's compass or any mechanical means whatever. The man who desires to make the experiment should place himself at the edge of the stream if on stand perfectly still, face the opposite bank and lower the beam of his hat until it just cuts the opposite bank. Then let him put both hands under his chin to steady his head and turn slowly round until the hat brim cuts some point on the level ground behind him. Mark the spot where the hat brim cuts the ground, then pace off the distance, and it will be found about the breadth of the river.

Quite Homelike.

A little boy was taken by his parents to a theater to witness the performance of a domestic comedy, during one of the acts of which an altercation takes place between the supposed man and wife.

Having arrived home, his mother asked him to tell the guest how he liked the play.

"It looked it very well," lisped the child, looking up at his mother. "But why did that lady and gentleman quarrel in the presence of so many people? When you and papa quarrel, you always shut all the doors and windows so that no one can hear you."
