Maguire looked up from her second time to meet the man of brown eyes. Again a sense of familiarity in their gaze went back to the past fifteen years.

"I'm sure there's nothing strange about this," she solloquized, "after me attending in this waiting room for the past fifteen years."

when a slight figure in dark blue sat in the ladies' waiting room, how many excuses Mrs. Maguire found for excursions to different parts of the station, with what eagerness she set out on these expeditions, and with dejection written in every line of her comely face when she returned.

"This watching for him she is herself," she thought, meeting the wifely interrogation of the dark eyes. And never did maiden look for the coming of her lover as did Mrs. Maguire for the tall figure which had imprinted itself on her memory.

It was a matter of genuine importance, however, which called her away one day just as her visitor entered.

"I'll be back in a minute," "This the superintendent himself wants me," she explained, smoothing down a snowy apron in a little bustle of excitement.

Half an hour later in returning she passed by the long line of tracks. A crowd surrounding a woman whose dark head was covered with a cotton handkerchief attracted her attention, and she drew near.

"What's the trouble, Mike?" she asked a uniformed fellow countryman.

"Them dagoes," Mike jerked a thumb over one shoulder. "Wan of thiz lost his mother, and nothin' do the young divil but to skrewe through the gates and try to cross the tracks just as No. 57 was pullin' in. If 'twasn't for that gentleman there, there'd be one foreigner less to grow up in the country."

Mrs. Maguire turned to look at the tall figure. One glance was sufficient. A moment later she was hanging to his arm with all the pressure of her 175 pounds.

"Wait, sir," she panted. "For the love of heaven, don't go!"

He looked down, amazed.

"Oh, I'm not mad, don't you think it?" And indeed the gray eyes raised to his were wonderfully sane behind their steel rimmed glasses.

"She's in there," Mrs. Maguire whispered.

"Shel' Who?"

"Herself—the little girl you married four years ago. Oh, didn't I see you? Sure, 'twas little else I did that blessed day but look at the picture you made. The curse of the Almighty on whoever came between you, for sure you must have the kind, brave heart to do what you just done."

The man paled as he had not done when looking death in the face.

"Go!" Mrs. Maguire gave him a push toward the waiting room door.

"She's in there, I tell you, ailing her heart out for a sight of you. And," grasping him again, "don't you say a word, but just take her along home."

As his broad back disappeared Mrs. Maguire laid hold of a newspaper stand for support.

A few minutes later when, with flushed cheeks, she passed, humming a bar of "Eileen Aroon" above a lump which threatened to choke her, they were sitting where they had sat four years before.

"Dear," he said huskily, his head bent over hers, "that we should meet here—it was fate."

"And Maggie Maguire," added that worthy woman as she entered her own domain.

Commenting on the slights that were put on Queen Victoria's consort, Prince Albert, Sidney Whitman says: "The prince consort brought to England ideas of his princely prerogative from Germany which did not accord with those to which the English aristocracy were accustomed and all the less so since many English noblemen thought themselves every bit as good as a German prince. One morning Prince Albert joined the meet of the royal buckhounds. All were awaiting the arrival of the master of the hunt in order to start the hounds. The prince consort ordered the hunt to begin, and this was at once done. Shortly afterward the master arrived and, hearing what had occurred, ordered the hounds to be called off and, turning his back upon the party, galloped off without further ado. Prince Albert rode back to Windsor and complained to the queen, who shared his indignation. She sent for Lord Palmerston, who was prime minister, and insisted that he should immediately call on the master of the buckhounds to resign. The prime minister replied that if this was her majesty's pleasure he saw no alternative but to place his own resignation, as well as that of all his colleagues, in her hands. The queen, therefore, for the time being at least, had to condone the slight put upon her husband."

Malay Running "Amok."

"Amok" is a religious fanaticism, a madness under which a man makes up his mind to kill any one he can until he himself is killed. Brought on by drink or religion, or from whatever cause, the process is the same. The madman seizes his creese and rushes headlong down the street, cutting at every one he meets. To any one who has seen a creese or a parang further detail is unnecessary.

A man running amok is as a dog with hydrophobia, but the panic caused by the former is by far the worse. Like the mad dog, the madman is followed by a noisy rabble, who sooner or later run into their man and exterminate him. When this vengeful rabble is made up of bloodthirsty Malays and Chinamen, its wild rage and fury are beyond control, beyond description. The clamor and blood curdling yells of the pursuing crowd and the ever nearing shout of "Oran amok! Oran amok!" are incidents which can never be forgotten by any one who has seen or heard them. The bravest quails when suddenly turning the corner of a street his ears are greeted with the cry of "Oran amok!" and a few yards off he sees a Malay running straight at him, his clashing in his hand the bloody creese with which he has already slaughtered all in his way.

SENECA FALLS.

The death of James McGorick, a former resident of Seneca Falls, occurred Saturday afternoon at Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks, of consumption, aged 38 years. He was a machinist by trade and for some time had been employed at Easton, Pa., going from there in November to the North Woods in hope that the change of climate would restore his health, but he steadily failed until his death. His sister, Miss Elizabeth McGorick, of this village, the only surviving member of his family, was with him during his last hours. The remains were brought here Sunday evening and taken to the home of Patrick Coffey in Seneca St. The funeral was held from St. Patrick's church, Tuesday morning, Rev. Father M. U. Dwyer officiating.

Michael Dobbins of Waterloo, and Miss Emma Waters of Seneca Falls, were married at St. Patrick's church, Wednesday afternoon by Rev. Father M. U. Dwyer.

The death of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Scott, wife of James Scott, occurred Tuesday afternoon in Geneva, age 85 years. Mrs. Scott was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Flanagan of Green St., and until her removal to Geneva about a year ago, had always lived in this village. Beside her husband and parents, she leaves two brothers, William and James of Dunkirk, and by four sisters, Misses Mary, Nellie, Margaret Flanagan of Seneca Falls, and Mrs. J. J. McNulty of Dunkirk. The funeral was held here Friday morning. The solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. M. U. Dwyer assisted by Rev. J. F. Nelligan, deacon, and Rev. W. E. Harrington and Very Rev. W. A. McDonald and Father O'Connor in the sanctuary.

Miss Lou Casey has gone to Rochester, having accepted employment there.

Mrs. E. J. Ryan was in Newark last week for the purpose of installing the officers of Branch 474, L. C. B. A.

Lawrence Harmon has gone to New York, where he has secured a position.

The Rev. Father Dwyer was in Auburn last Wednesday, where he attended the funeral of Jeremiah Harrington, brother of Rev. Father Harrington of Waterloo.

CANAANDAIGUA.

At the recent regents' examinations thirteen of our pupils completed their course at the parish school: John Long, James E. Smith, William Fogarty, Helen Johnston, Mabel Casey, John Linehan, William Flynn, Gertrude Tuohy, Chas. Ward, Teresa Farrell, John Curtin, Rose McDade and Mary Ganey. It is expected that sixteen more will finish at the end of the year.

We regret to chronicle the death of a most exemplary christian woman, Mrs. Rosta Hogan, nee Mary Grady, which took place at her home on Pearl St., Tuesday evening. She died in child-birth and leaves two boys, George and Edward and a little girl baby of eighteen months. She was a pious and devoted woman. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of all in their irreparable loss.

Little Margaret Callahan tenderly sang "O Saviour" at Benediction at St. Patrick's church last Sunday. The children's choir sang the mass on the feast of the Purification. The good nuns in charge are doing splendid work in training the youthful voices, and there is no doubt but in the years to come the pupils of the parochial school will feel grateful and hold in loving memory the noble women who are now teaching them.

Mrs. Mary Mannin is slowly recovering from a rheumatic attack.

Miss Elizabeth E. Blum gave a delightful progressive euchre party last Monday evening. Favors were won by Miss Alice Rowan, Miss Margaret E. Barrett and M. Joseph Blum. The evening's entertainment closed with a musical program.

Miss Finzer of Rochester, is the guest of the Misses Kilbrk.

Miss Fox of Addison, is visiting Miss Zena Blum.

Awkwardly Expressed.

She was a large woman and not what you would call handsome, but then she was an heiress. Still the designing youth might have been more diplomatic.

"Miss Tubbs," he said when he thought it was about time to bring matters to a head—"Sarah, for months past my thoughts and aspirations have been centered on one great object—"

She smiled encouragingly.

"Miss Tubbs—Sarah, need I say it? You are that great object!"

"Sir!"

And a few moments later the would be suitor crept dejectedly from the house.

Didn't Know John.

A short time ago in a certain part of Scotland a clergyman who had not been long in the place, having occasion to officiate at the funeral of one of his flock, made in his sermon some touching allusions to the widow of the deceased.

On coming out of church the lady who had been the object of his compassionate remarks, turning to her pastor, said:

"That was a grand sermon, Mr. X., but what did ye mean when ye said, 'This woman stricken with grief?'"

"Why, oh, of course, Mrs. D."

"Oh, well, well, of course ye meant kindly enough, na doot, but then, mon, ye saw ye John ken John."

EDWARD SHUTER.

Some interesting Reminiscences of the Famous Actor.

We are told in one of the garrulous books of eighteenth century memoirs that when Woodward and Garrick and Ned Shuter and old Parsons dined together there was "more hilarity, more quaint and comical development of character, than ever was seen exhibited on the stage."

In Ned Shuter, as in most comedians of any depth, there was a subviciousness of pathos, even of cynicism. Referring to his origin, which is shrouded in mystery, he once said, "I suppose I must have had parents, but I never remember having friends."

His contemporaries marveled at his keen understanding of character and his irresistible humor, and one verdict was to the effect that neither on the French nor on the English stage could any one be found to whom he could be compared. Diddin quaintly said: "His great fault was indolence, but eccentric qualities will naturally be accompanied by eccentric conduct. Thus we perceive in his acting great inequalities, but those parts of it that were sterling were invaluable to."

Shuter possessed great brilliance of mind and hated to be called upon by every company he sat with to do some bit of clowning. Upon one occasion of this kind he assumed an air of preternatural gravity and steadfastly refused to "show off" before his host's guests. After the meal was over one of the company who could not bear longer to be deprived of the free performance he anticipated said, "Come, Mr. Shuter, when do you intend to begin to be comical?"

"Gad, sir," answered the actor, "I forgot my fool's dress! However, I'll go and fetch it if you will be my substitute until my return."

The guest accepted this rebuff as a delicious pleasantry and, chuckling heartily, promised to do so. Shuter picked up his hat and cane and went away—to return no more.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Fit For Wholesale.

According to an Edinburgh paper, a farmer drove a fine bull with a scrubby tail into the market recently, and while he was gazing at it reflectively a solemn friend approached. "Ye'll hae to sell the beast wholesale," said he.

The owner came from his reverie. "What fer?"

"Well," assured the solemn friend, nodding his head toward the scrubby "pendal arcaudage" and pursing his lips, "well, ye can't have him retail'd."—London Globe.

Three Women.

Josephine was thirty-three when she married Napoleon, and, judging from the letters written by the absent husband during the early years of their union, she inspired the redoubtable soldier with most intense love and jealousy. It is claimed by many writers that she was the only woman Napoleon ever really loved. Cleopatra was nearer forty than thirty when Mark Antony fell beneath her spell, and the most beautiful woman the world has ever known, Helen of Troy, was long past thirty when the Trojan heroes fought their famous battles for her sake.
