Snubbed the Prince Comsort.

Commenting on the slights that were put on Queen Victoria's consort, Prince Albert, Sidney Whitman says: "The prince consort brought to England ideas of his princely prerogative from Germany which did not accord with those to which the English aristocracy were accustomed and all the less so since many English noblemen thought themselves every bit as good as a German prince. One morning Prince Albert joined the meet of the royal buckhounds. All were awaiting the arrival of the master of the hunt in order to start the hounds. The prince consort ordered the hunt to begin, and this was at once done. Shortly afterward the master arrived and, hearing what had occurred, ordered the bounds to be called off and, turning his back upon the party, galloped off without further ado. Prince Albert rode back to Windsor and complained to the queen, who shared his indignation. She sent for Lord Palmerston, who was prime minister, and insisted that he should immediately call on the master of the buckhounds to resign. The prime minister place his own resignation, as well as end of the year. that of all his colleagues, in her hands. The queen, therefore, for the time beput upon her husband."

EDWARD SHUTER.

Interesting Reminiscent the Famous Actor.

We are told in one of the garrulous books of eighteenth century memoirs that when Woodward and Garrick and Ned Shuter and old Parsons dined together there was "more hilarity, more quaint and comical development of character, than ever was seen exhibited on the stage."

In Ned Shuter, as in most comedians of any depth, there was a subvein of pathos, even of cynicism.

Referring to his origin, which is shrouded in mystery, he once said,
"I suppose I must have had parents,"

A. M.—I:05, 2:05, 4:00 5:38, 6 17. "I suppose I must have had parents, ii.io but I never remember having friends." His contemporaries marveled at his keen understanding of character and his irresistible humor, and one verdict was to the effect that neither on the French nor on the English din quaintly said: "His great fault was indolence, but eccentric qualities will naturally be accompanied by eccentric conduct. Thus we perceive in his acting great inequalities, *\frac{11:35}{7:50, *8.40. *0.45. *10:15,}

After the meal was over one of the company who could not bear longer to be deprived of the free performance he anticipated said, "Come, Mr. Shuter, when do you intend to begin to be comical?"

"Gad, sir," answered the actor, 'I forgot my fool's dress! However, I'll go and fetch it if you will be my substitute until my return."

The guest accepted this rebuff as a delicious pleasantry and, chuckling heartily, promised to do so. Shuter picked up his hat and cane and went away-to return no more .-Chicago Record-Herald.

According to an Edinburgh paper, a farmer drove a fine bull with a scrubby tail into the market recently, and while he was gazing at it reflectively a solemn friend approached. "Ye'll hae to sell th' beast wholesale," said he.
