The death of Mr. John Hynes, Ballyclera, Ballindereen, occurred March 6. He had been for many years a member of the old Board of Guardians of that Union. No man in the Barony of Offartion was better or more favorably known than he.

The United Irish League in Manorhamilton held a meeting March 15. Members present: F. F. Meehan, chairman; Thomas Gilgunn, Patrick McGuinness, Hugh Keany, Francis Ward, Patrick Gilgunn, T. McGrath, Joseph McSharry, John Rooney, Felix Laughlin, P. Gaffney, John Gaffney, James Clancy, J. McGowan, D. Kelly. Subscriptions toward the defense fund were handed in. MAYO.—Mr. Peter J. Kelly, of Westport died suddenly March 19, deeply and widely mourned. He was a justice of the peace and member of the following boards: County Council, Board of Guardians, District Council and Town Council. Deceased was a true son of the Catholic church and a patriotic Irishman.

ROSCOMMON.—The Nationalists of Castleroa allow no year to pass since the death of Mr. John Larin, on March 23, 1879, without paying a visit on the anniversary of his death. Sunday, March 8, his Nationalist friends decorated his grave, and a white rose tree was planted at his head by John Egan.

SLIGO.—Father Mumphreys presided at meeting of the Moyilough Branch of the United Irish League held on March 15, when the following resolution was passed unanimously: "That we condemn the decisions of Judge O'Connor Morris and Mr. Justice Barton in the action brought by Perdue against the Rev. Father Spelman and others, and we hope that the Irish national spirit will support the cause, which, despite the decisions of government judges, shall remain at front; and that we sympathize with the reverend chairmen, Kilmactigue Branch, U. I. L., and promise him our support financially and otherwise." On the motion of Mr. L. Saece, seconded by Mr. M. O'Connor, it was unanimously resolved that Mr. J. P. O'Dowd and Mr. J. CLARE.—The workmen on the Carrigoran estate, near Newmarket-on-Fergus, struck work lately. While cutting down trees, injured by the storm, a young boy named Grogan fell from a tree, a distance of forty feet. With callous indifference to the injuries sustained by the boy, the steward, a Yorkshire yokel named Barker ordered another boy named McCarthy to proceed to do the same work. The father refused and he was immediately dismissed. Another man was taken on to replace McCarthy, but the men refused to work with him and left their employment. Men of Barker's British instincts must be taught a lesson. The boy Grogan had a miraculous escape from being killed. This strike was not for shorter hours of work or for an increase of wages, but as a protest to a foreign brute who showed no feeling for the boy who was injured.

CORK.—In recognition of the laudable efforts of the members of the County of Cork Gaelic League in their efforts to secure a national monument in Cork, the senior parliamentary representative for Cork City, Mr. William O'Brien, has presented a magnificent silver cup to the society for competition among the hurling and football clubs, the proceeds of which will be devoted to erecting the national monument in course of completion on the Grand Parade. The cup will excite competition of a keen character. Mr. O'Brien's timely gift has been enhanced by the fact that the presentation was unexpected and not sought for.

The Cork Examiner of March 18 said: "This year's St. Patrick's Day anniversary in Cork will not fade from the minds of those who beheld the great national demonstration which passed along the main thoroughfares of Cork yesterday. On all sides fitting tribute was paid the memory of Ireland's patron saint, and the remarkable manifestation testified that the people's allegiance to faith and fatherland is as strong as ever. It was unmistakably demonstrated everywhere. Business was suspended in all the establishments and shops, and this year's observance has been remarkable in many respects, not the least of which was the inauguration of what has now come to be recognized as a public holiday. Banners and banners were suspended from large numbers of private dwellings, and from various societies. The little sprig of trefoll was profusely displayed. The huge demonstration itself was representative of all creeds and classes and the order and discipline with which the thousands of people were marshaled was a conspicuous feature of the great and imposing national pageant. The many trades organizations, the branches of the Gaelic League, Young Ireland Society, Gaelic, Hurling and Football clubs, Daughters of Erin, Cork Pipers' Club, Irish National Foresters, Cork Catholic Boys' Brigade, etc. made a very creditable display. The city bands and contingents from outside the city with their bands, helped to augment the huge multitude. At the Cathedral before a large congregation, an effective and telling sermon in Irish was preached by the Rev. Father O'Connell Formony. The Lord Mayor, with the nationalist members of the council in their robes of office, were in attendance at the mass and subsequently a luncheon was given at the Municipal buildings.

On Thursday, March 12, there were re-located to their last resting place in St. Joseph's cemetery, within the convent grounds of Doneraile, the remains of Mother Mary Patrick McManus, Presentation Convent. It is over forty-two years since she joined this old-established community, one of the most ancient in Ireland, and during all those years she never lost sight of the goal she aimed at, viz. the greater glory of God, the sanctification of her own soul, and the spiritual and temporal advancement of the children committed to her care. For years she filled all the most responsible offices of the community, having been more than once elected as Reverend Mother, and being at the time of her demise assistant mother. She was the daughter of the late Mr. Matthew McManara, of Ballyhea, the niece to Canon Ryan, Aghada. Most Rev. Dr. Browne, bishop of Cloyne, came to preside at the function.

KERRY.—On March 14 a grand concert was held in the Market Hall, Cashel, under the auspices of the South Kerry G. A. A. board. The large hall was filled to its utmost capacity by an appreciative audience. All the items were thoroughly Irish, and many of the songs were given in the native language. On March 17 a young man named Leahy, son of a farmer residing at Ahane, Broma, was found dead on Winter's Mountain, Rockchapel district. He and a companion named Mc Cormack were returning from a visit in the County Limerick, and were proceeding by a short cut over Millicec Mountain, when they lost their way, and Leahy, becoming exhausted owing to the inclemency of the night, perished from exposure. His companion was in a precarious condition when rescued.

LIMERICK.—A branch of the Anti-Treating League was established at Glin on Sunday and Monday, March 8 and 9, when a great number became members. For several Sundays previous to the opening of Father Quigley's mission, the Ven. Archdeacon Roche, and Rev. Fathers McCarthy and Conway explained the principles and rules of the League. It was also put before them that there was an exceptional opportunity of serving religion and country, and that if they held aloof from the movement by reason of the dangerous liberty of treating others, they would be blocking the way. Father Quigley, who is a member of the community who reside at the Mission House, Ennisceorthy, made an eloquent appeal to the congregations to join the league and had the pleasure of enrolling numbers of the people. The certificate for members of the new league of St. Patrick is a four-page leaflet. On the first page is a picture of the apostle of Ireland. Last St. Patrick's Day will hold a high and permanent place in the history of Limerick City. It was a national holy day and holiday in every sense. The demonstration through the city was an imposing one, and one that reflects the highest credit on the Gaelic League and their president, the Rev. T. Lee, A.M. The marshalling of the bodies commenced soon after 12 o'clock and by an hour everything was in order. The trades, as well as the bands, which attended to the number of six, carried banners, and shortly after one o'clock the procession started.

TIPPERARY.—The festival of the patron saint of Ireland was observed in Clonmel in a most edifying manner. It was like a Sunday, all the shops being closed, and business suspended. The death occurred on March 15 at the Mater Misericordiae Hospital, Dublin, of the Rev. James Quinlan, B. A., of the diocese of Waterford and Lismore, son of the late Mr. Robert Quinlan, of Manganstown, at the early age of 25 years. The funeral left Carrick-on-Suir, March 17, and was very numerously attended. Chief mourners were: Mr. Martin Freaney, son; John Freaney, brother; Mrs. M. Kerwick, sister; Michael, Patrick and the Misses Kerwick; P. Freaney, J. and J. Cleary, relatives.

CARLOW.—On St. Patrick's Day we grand and successful entertainments—afternoon and evening—were given in the Courthouse, Bagnalstown, in connection with the bazaar organized by Rev. P. Murphy for the purpose of raising funds to pay debts on the schools, primary and secondary, to renovate and decorate the Church of St. Andrew and to provide, if possible, some to industry.

The feast of the national apostle was observed with becoming solemnity in Carlow, and for the first time in its history, all classes and creeds were unanimous in proclaiming it a national holy day and holiday in the strictest sense of the word. Business of every description was suspended. The whole appearance of the town was in marked contrast with that of former years. The weather was dull, but its depressing influences were ignored by the holiday seekers, who were determined to make the most of "the day." The Carlow Workingmen's Club brass band paraded the streets in the afternoon, playing national music, and subsequently they discoursed a fine selection of Irish airs in the Market square. The religious observance was carried out with great devotion at the Cathedral at the 7 o'clock mass in the morning. Rev. Father Harris preached, dealing with the life and labors of St. Patrick and with his call and mission to holy Ireland. Pontifical high mass was celebrated at noon. The Most Rev. Dr. Foley, bishop of Kildare and Leighlin,

The Rev. Dean Brabb, Carlow college, assistant priest. The deacons at the Throne were Rev. Father McNaboe and Rev. Father Nagle, and the deacon and sub-deacon of the mass were respectively, Rev. Father Roridan and Rev. Father McManus. Rev. Father Heffernan was master of ceremonies. DUBLIN.—On March 13 the Archbishop of Dublin, Most Rev. Dr. Walsh, accompanied by Canon Connolly, visited the new convent and convent chapel of the Little Sisters of the Assumption, Camden street, Dublin. His Grace was much pleased with the new chapel, lately built. Later in the day he visited the studios and workshops of Messrs. Early, Camden street, and inspected some of the stained glass for the large west window of St. Kevin's Parish Church, Harrington street, Dublin.

In St. Paul's Mount Argus, St. Patrick's night was celebrated in a genuinely Irish fashion. There was rosary in Irish, hymns in Irish, and a sermon in Irish, by Very Rev. Canon McFadden, Donegal. This was the first time an Irish sermon was preached in Dublin for a long time. A year or so ago Father White preached a sermon in Irish in the Franciscan church, Merchants' quay, but very few leaguers were aware of the fact, and there was a small attendance. However, St. Paul's was crowded on St. Patrick's night. The life and labors of St. Patrick described in Irish by Father McFadden was worth going a long distance to hear.

Hill, to take his departure from among us, and while deploring his loss to the branch and to Windgap generally, we wish him many bright and happy days in his native home, to which he is returning." The resolution was seconded by Mr. W. O'Neill, and passed unanimously.

KINGS.—A concert under the auspices of the Kilderrery Branch of the Gaelic League was held in the Town Hall, Edenderry, on St. Patrick's night, the proceeds going to the fund for the preservation of the Irish language. The event will be remembered always in Edenderry owing to the extraordinary success which attended it. The program opened with Moore's exquisite lyric, "Let Erin Remember," sung by the school children's choir, conducted by Miss Mary Farrell. Mr. P. Kennedy gave an instructive and most interesting address on "Ireland." Mr. M. Shine sang, "Saint Patrick's Day." Miss McDermott sang "Eileen A'annah," and Misses Horan, Donegan and Haughton, sang, "Eileen Oge." Miss Nellie Horan, recited "Morning on the Irish Coast." All the other items were of a like Irish character. Among those who contributed to the success of the entertainment were John Phelan and P. O'Brien.

LONGFORD.—Mr. Michael Dunne, of Cashel, died March 1 at the patriarchal age of 92 years; deeply mourned. He had been Prior of the Dominican Tertiarities. Solemn requiem services and funeral were largely attended. LOUTH.—From the Drogheda Independent of March 21: "From an advertisement, which appears in our columns, are glad to see that there is a prospect of a branch of the Pinefor and Apron factory in operation at Balbriggan for years, being started in Drogheda. If a sufficient number of young women, accustomed to work sewing machines, make application to the Boyne Weaving Company before the first of next month the branch factory, which will be located in premises at the West Gate Mill, with a separate entrance, will be started. As there are a good number of female workers in search of employment it is to be hoped that the opportunity now offered to the means of earning a livelihood will be availed of, and the new branch factory established.

MEATH.—The death of Mr. Jack Aberne, Ross, Oldcastle, occurred on St. Patrick's morning. The deceased was in his usual good health up to a short time ago, when he contracted a chill which developed into pneumonia. The funeral took place on Thursday to the family burial place at Castletown, and was largely attended. The priests officiating were Rev. Fr. Glynn and Father Horan, relative of the deceased.

QUEEN'S.—On Feb. 19, at R. C. church, Killina, by the Rev. P. Smith, P. P., was married Michael Mooney, Killeenmore House, Killeigh, third son of the late John Mooney, Quarrymount, and brother to the Rev. Joseph Mooney, Graigue, County Kilkenny, and Rev. J. Mooney, Bagnalstown, to Ellen, daughter of Daniel Higgins, Ballykeenan House, Rahau.

WESTMEATH.—Father Carpenter, on his departure from Collinstown, for Taughmon, bade good-bye to the people of Fore, the whole countryside turning over. On his return the parishioners, bearing torch lights and headed by the Fore Temperance band, marched with the reverend gentleman to the parochial house in Collinstown. Father Carpenter established temperance clubs and bands in Fore, Glanlilan and Collinstown, and on his departure the prayers of the parishioners went with him.

WEXFORD.—The Irish language demonstration in Ennisceorthy, Sunday March 15, was a magnificent turnout. The weather was not favorable, but that had not a deterrent effect on the people. Even the little girls from the Mercy and Presentation Convent schools marched heroically and took the places allotted to them, heedless of the uncomfortable downpour. Mr. A. J. Furlong, chief marshal of the procession, got the various bodies into order in excellent time and arranged for the collections to be made and looked after the arrangements generally with energy. He was assisted in the marshalling by the committee of the Gaelic League. The following were conspicuous in seeing that the program was properly carried out: Rev. J. Dunne, A.M., Rev. Robert Fitzhenry, Rev. D. J. Kavanagh, Rev. W. Harpur, chaplain; Rev. Patrick Murphy, M. S. S.

The girls of the two convent schools were looked after by the mistresses and formed a considerable portion of the gathering of Gaels. Mr. Maloney, Superior, Christian Brothers; Mr. Norris and the other members of the order got their boys together, and a fine lot they are. The future men of Ennisceorthy are getting a training in the right direction, and will grow up true Gaels and Irishmen.

The demonstration on Tuesday, March 17, which marked the inaugural celebration of St. Patrick's day as a holiday and holiday at Wexford, was a striking affair. It was a grand and imposing spectacle, and in its religious aspects it was a touching demonstration of Christian faith and unity. The decorations in Main street were fine. The efforts of the members of the Mechanics' Institute at decoration were happy. Anne street, too, where the Mayor and the National Club led the way, looked well. But perhaps the most picturesque scene of all was that on the quays, that portion of the town which the procession did not touch. From the great majority of the houses flags and banners floated in the breeze those of the St. Itherus Catholic club being very attractive. On the crescent from Meagher's forge to Mr. Walsh's timber yard flags crossed the harbor commissioner's offices, emblematic of maritime art and commerce. The decorations of the shipping along the quays were very imposing. Some of the vessels carried streamers along the rigging from the deck to the masthead. The scene in St. Peter's square prior to the starting of the procession was inspiring. Shortly after one o'clock the people began to converge on that center, and at two o'clock the fine quadrangle was thronged. Triumphant arches and flags flanked the angles, and from the windows overlooking the square and its approaches similarly expressive symbols were conspicuous. Every point of vantage was taken possession of, and from every window the spectators gazed on the animated and picturesque scene. Punctually at two o'clock the Mayor, who wore his chain and robes of office, arrived, attended by his civic officers in regalia. His worship was accompanied in his carriage by Wexford's Grand Old Man Ben. Hughes and other members of the corporate body. The carriages in which wore seated representatives of the Gaelic League, '98 Borough Association and private members of the municipal council arrived shortly afterward, and the gathering began the work of getting into processional

At a few minutes past two o'clock the marshals gave the signal and the movement along Joseph street to the strains of "St. Patrick's Day," commenced. The St. Brigid's Pipe and Drum Band led the van, followed by the boys' branch of the Confraternity with their famous football club (the Blue and Whites). The members of the Boys' Brigade, too, who were marshalled by Father J.W. O'Byrne, looked smart in their caps and sashes. The Gaelic Leaguers of Wexford, Castlebridge and Crossabeg followed, led by Father Clooney, president of the Wexford branch; Father Gault Father Kennedy, Father Isaac Scallan, Father Byrne and Father Harpur, Ennisceorthy. The Gaelic contingent, which numbered 200 members, were followed by the Ennisceorthy Workingmen's Brass and Re Band, who wore their picturesque new uniforms. The mayor's carriage succeeded, followed by the carriages of other members of the municipal council. The Rugby club, numbering eighty members, were headed by Mr. N. O'Hanlon Walsh, who carried the club's attractive banner. A deputation from the Wexford '98 Borough Association followed. The members of the Mechanics' Institute, numbering 200 members, made a fine show, though scarcely less striking was the presence of the members of the Catholic Young Men's Society (the St. Itherus Club) who mustered 150 members. The little pupils of the Christian Brothers' schools followed to the number of a couple of hundred. Sandwiched between the Bridgetown and Blackwater Bands, which enlivened the march by the rendering of patriotic and sacred music, were the iron workers of Doyle's, Pierce's and the "Star" foundries, who made an imposing "turnout." The sailors, too, marshalled by Captain Brady sent a strong contingent, and the carpenters, tailors and other trades were fully represented. The following acted as marshals: James Furlong and Thomas Godfrey (the indefatigable honorary secretaries to the demonstration) L. Hynes, P. F. Murphy, N. O'Neill and others.

Ulster

ANTRIM.—On March 15, before 8 members of the National Literary and Dramatic Society, Belfast, Mr. Cahal O'Byrne, delivered a lecture on "Tara's Halls." Mr. O'Byrne concluded his lecture by an appeal for the preservation of the unity now established. By endeavoring to do our parts in this direction, the name of the Irish people would go down to posterity as a great and noble race.

ARMAGH.—A very sad occurrence took place March 16 at Blundellscree. A farmer named John Hamill was burned to death in his own house. Deceased was found lying across the fire, terribly burnt and quite dead. It appears that deceased had been in failing health and subject to fits. It is believed that during one of these fits he fell into the fire and was burned to death. Deceased was strictly temperate.

On St. Patrick's Day, in Armagh, the early masses were attended by immense congregations, and there was a large number of communicants. At the ten o'clock mass hymns in the Irish language were rendered by the children's choir under Mr. Nicholas Hession, organist. Cardinal Logue presided at a solemn high mass, celebrated by Rev. Peter Sheerin, Armagh; Rev. J. Downey, C. M. St. Patrick's College, deacon, and Rev. Joseph Dunne, Armagh, sub-deacon. Rev. P. J. Loughran, E. I. master of ceremonies. After mass the cardinal preached the panegyric of St. Patrick. The bands paraded the city and played Irish airs.

DERRY.—In Dunmanagh parish there are two fine branches of the Gaelic League in which there are four hundred persons learning the Irish language.

DONEGAL.—Very Rev. Canon McFadden, pastor of Glenties, delivered a sermon on St. Patrick in the Irish language in the church of the Passionists, Mount Argus, Dublin, on the national festival. Great numbers attended the sermon.

DOWN.—La Fheile Padraig was celebrated in Castletewell in a manner that gladdened the hearts of all true Irishmen and women. The Castletewell Coisde Ceanntair must get the credit for the observance of the national holiday, and the celebration committee deserves credit for its energetic action.

FERMANAGH.—The election of Mr. Edward Mitchell, the land purchase bill candidate for the Parliamentary division of North Fermanagh, has given satisfaction to all classes but that portion of the land owners who are not willing to sell to the tenants.

MONAGHAN.—Mr. Thos. Finnegan Keahorn, Clones, died March 5, aged 74 years. The interment in the local cemetery was very numerously attended.
