There is a little spot in the Emerald Isle
I'd love to see, well to see
The happy home of childhood days
Which is called you and me
It is called out which served as paint
With beauty grace and cheer
It covered dunes and windows over
Our own symbol green
In youth we often played beside
The flowing brooklet clear
We sat and gazed into the skies
Sweet Molly of Kildare
With hunger death and famine dire
Through woodland and deer lea
Have our fathers and others wandered
In that isle beyond the sea
CHORUS
No hand of tyranny shall dare
Tohasten you and me

And make sad the hearts of thousands
In that isle beyond the sea
O spirit bold of brave Parnell
And witty Irish glee
Ring round the world ring out the knell
Old Ireland shall be free
For years her sons have suffered
Under Briton's grasping rule
And brought upon the Celtic race
The greatest ridicule
I'd love to go where flows the stream,
And breathe in freedom's air,
Once more upon those banks to roam,
With Molly of Kildare.
Then hurrah, hurrah let us go forth,
To meet those sturdy foes,
And teach them there no cowards
Where the green shamrock grows.
