Through all futurity." In Catholic countries the "blessing of the graves' is a venerable and cherished custom, but is observed on the feast of the Commemoration of All Souls. in November. Few would imagine, if in Paris on that day, that it deserved the irreligious reputation it bears, as they saw thousands of men, women and children on the street cars, and in elegant equipages, making their way to Pere la Chaise and the other cometeries, their arms laden with flowers and immortelles, to take part in a ceremony identical with that to be pelebrated here to-morrow.

Arrangements have been made with s sentleman, who has lately returned from a trip to the German "Vaterland" to write series of special articles on his visite the larger cities and other points of interest there. The first of the se will appear in our next issue.

Carmel and its "Carmelites."

Written for The Catholic Journal by Veritas] On the summit of Mount Carmel in Palestine, the historic retreat during his earthly life (it is held that he has not yet paid nature's great debtdeath, and must again return to earth whence he was taken in the flery chariot) of the great prophet Elias, is situated a convent of discalced Carmelite friars. The order claims, and reasonably, that Elias was the first barefooted Carmelite, and that no more suitable place could be devised for a house of their "contemplative order" than this lone promontory in the Levant with its pious associations. Despite the significance of its name, "vineyard have been made to establish there colonies of Americans and Europeans

The First and Greatest Commandment.

Christ has told us that the second great commandment is to love our neighbor as ourselves; that is, we must love him sincerely, ardently and effectively, but always for the love of God.

The same divine leacher taught us the way to practise it when He said: 'Do unto others as you wish them to do unto you." Hence St. Augustine, explaining this maxim, says: "Whatever good we wish for ourselves, the same we must procure for our neighbor, and the evil that we fear we must prevent from befalling our neighbor."

God has commanded us to love our neighbor as ourselves, but always for love of Him, in regard to Him, with of the Lord," Carmel is to-day a eyes fixed on Him alone. Therefore spot. A Word About Fall Gloves.

Our importations of new fall gloves are here, opened, and ready for distribution, likewise purchases from domestic manufacturers.

For years we have made a very special study of the glove business, looked into all the details of making; noted faults and eliminated them; picked out the good points of this glove and that glove and embodied them in our product. Today we feel amply repaid for all this painstaking care in being able to offer a line of gloves which we believe is unexcelled in fit, general style and wearing qualities. Assortments are amply sufficient to satisfy tastes:
