Beware of Ointments for Catarrh of the Larynx.

He Liked Young People.
In his last work, "Facts and Comments," Herbert Spencer gives a curious bit of self revelation. He confesses that, though he particularly liked the society of young people, it bored him to an unendurable extent if they worried him with uninteresting chatter, and that to avoid this it was his custom to ask them some question which could not be answered without a good deal of thought. He was accustomed to base his judgment of their intellects upon the answers returned, and we can well imagine that those who were suddenly confronted with some such problem as "Why is the sea salt?" must have regarded a drive with the great philosopher as something of an ordeal. —London Globe.

A Unique Monument.
It is not often that a monument is erected in honor of the tactfulness of a hostess in a trying situation. One of the few such, if not the only one, is a boulder from the battlefield of Harlem heights, removed to Park avenue in New York, to mark the site of the home of Mrs. Robert Murray, who entertained and so detained the British officers under General Howe while the American troops under General Putnam were escaping from the city. The monument bears an inscription on brass setting forth Mrs. Murray's achievement. What a difference there might have been in American history had Mrs. Murray been a less capable hostess!

Prayer To Our Mother.

List Mother, we thy children are pleading
For thy love in this vale of tears.
List Mother, for thy aid we are seeking
In this earthly strife of years.
Mother the storm at times grows dire,
White on waves' tempestuous sea,
And the waves roll on, roll high and higher
While our aching heart cries out to thee.
And our fragile bark drifts on through darkness,
But thou anchor of hope, thou ray of light,
Stretch forth thy hand in love and kindness,
Guide thy children through the night,
Guide us on through night and darkness,
Guide us to the heavenly shore,
Stretch forth thy hand in love and kindness
Bless thy children ever more.

Five Minute Sermon

The Laborers in the Vineyard.

This parable is explained in two ways. It may be applied to men in general or to each Christian in particular.

The early morning signifies the time from Adam to Noe; the third hour represents the time from Abraham to Moses; the ninth hour the time from Moses to Christ; the eleventh hour the time from Christ to the end of the world; and the evening is the great day of judgment.

From the beginning of the world, that is, the morning, the third, sixth and ninth hours, God, by the voice and example of the patriarchs, by the written law, and by the words of the prophets, called men, particularly the Hebrews, to believe in Christ and hope for His coming, and to unite themselves to Him by holiness of life. At the eleventh hour, by the preaching of Christ and of His apostles and their successors God has called, calls and will continue to call men to enter into the Catholic Church and become living members of the mystical body of Jesus Christ and to observe His faith fully by observing His holy laws. In the evening that is, on the day of judgment, all those who will have belonged to the Church of Christ, who will have entered the Church—the vineyard—in the early morning, at the third, sixth, ninth, or eleventh hour, will receive without distinction, in reward of their labors, eternal life and the glory of paradise.

As God Would Have Us.

We need not fear man's judgment nor be elated by his praise. The world praises where little praise is due and oftentimes condemns when the best motives have inspired our actions. One thing alone is necessary, one question only must we ask ourselves and answer honestly. Are our lives such as God would have them, such as He intended them to be; are we making the best use possible of all our faculties, bending all our energies toward the fulfillment of His will? If so, then all is well.

St. Teresa's Offering.

St. Teresa one day brought to a priest who desired to wash his hands a box of perfumed water. "Why this luxury?" asked the priest.
"Being unable," replied the saint, "to render this service to our Lord, I desire to proffer it to the hands that touch Him."

Pure Love.

The least act of pure love is more precious in God's sight than a whole ocean of charitable works and contributions which are mixed up and debased by worldly fashion, excitement and self in its thousand forms.

Saved His Friend.

This little story is told of two Scotch laddies who, while fishing in strictly preserved water, for which only one was provided with a permit, were suddenly confronted by the bailiff. One of them quickly collected his tackle and ran his might across the field, the bailiff in quick pursuit. After covering a large tract of country the angler sat down completely exhausted and awaited the panting and enraged pursuer.
"Do you know that you should not fish in that water without permission?" asked the irate man.
"Yes," said the lad, "but I have permission. I've got an order."
"What made you run then, you young scoundrel?"
"Oh, just to let the other lad away—he hadn't got one."

A REMARKABLE ECHO

WONDERFUL SOUND EFFECTS IN A NEW YORK MONUMENT.

The Famous Baptistery at Pisa Outdone by the Soldiers' Shaft on Riverside Drive, Where Sound Rolls About Like a Ball.

A big French motor car occupied by two men and two very pretty women whirred up Riverside drive late Sunday evening and at Ninetieth street drew up and stopped at the approach to the Soldiers and Sailors' monument. It was long past the hour when the crowd of fashionable promenaders leaves the drive as the party of four stepped out of the big, vibrating machine and climbed the steps to the monument.

One of the men was a millionaire well known in the financial district. The other was a great tenor. With them were the millionaire's wife and a woman known in half a dozen European capitals as one of the greatest operatic coaches living—a woman who is a constant attendant upon operatic stars and a sharer in no small degree in their musical triumphs.

If it had been made during a Sunday or a weekday afternoon, a crowd of fashionable folk would undoubtedly have had their curiosity piqued by the peculiar visit of four such well known people. The whole affair was so bizarre and the sounds which soon issued from the narrow entrance to the glistening white monument were so strange that at any but a late night hour a crowd must have quickly filled the plaza around the marble shaft. A desire to escape any such annoying incidents probably led the visitors to choose the nighttime for their visit.

"The average American is a consummate ass," said the New Yorker as he guided the small party up the moonlit steps to the monument. "He travels to the utmost parts of the world, spends barrels of money and generally writes a book or two describing the marvelous things he sees, when by remaining right at home he could have seen sights of a similar kind which would have knocked the spots off the things on which he has wasted his patrimony and paragraphs of superlatives."

"But echoes, signor," replied the tenor as he grasped the Wall street man's arm. "Echoes such as we have in the baptistery! Never—except in the old cathedrals of Italy!"

"That's just what Americans say," retorted the New Yorker. "They go into ecstasies raptures over European mediocrity without knowing that they live among the greatest collection of marvels in the world. Listen to this."

The party had reached the door leading to the interior of the monument. A solid cylindrical wall of marble and granite surrounded a slender room empty save for a half dozen dried wreaths lying on one corner of the stone floor. When the whole party had wormed its way into the monument, the Wall street man bade them be very still and with upturned face intoned a low note. An echo was heard which rivaled those marvelous reverberations which have drawn travelers to distant parts of the world and have been the subjects of brilliant descriptions in the daily press and between covers. The note seemed instantly transformed into a moving ball of sound. Its journey to the distant stone ceiling could be distinctly traced. It seemed to be wafted upward like a ring of smoke or a cottony dandelion seed. The sound decreased until the note seemed to strike the small, high ceiling, where it lingered a moment before commencing its downward trip. Gradually increasing in loudness, it came back to the floor of the monument, apparently as loud and as intact as when it was uttered. The whole wonderful incident occupied only a few seconds, but every stage of the sound's trip to the top of the monument and back was as pronounced and as easily traced as though it had been a butterfly or a toy balloon.

"Magnificent!" exclaimed the tenor in tones of rapture and surprise. "I never dreamed such a marvelous echo existed outside the baptistery at Pisa."

His voice made a perfect riot of sound within the narrow shaft. Countless tones going and coming in rapid succession produced an effect almost painful upon the ears of the listeners.

At the request of one of the women the tenor sang very slowly and softly a few phrases of "La Donna e Mobile." The effect was peculiarly beautiful. Two men seemed to be singing, one a half beat behind the other. As in the Wall street man's experiment, each note could be heard distinctly soaring aloft to the ceiling and back. At the return of each note in its original vigor and fullness the effect of a second singer was produced. The union of the bell-like tones of the beautiful voice, the wonderful echo and the peculiar strangeness of the whole situation brought cries of delight from the two women.

"I believe it is as fine as the one in Pisa," said the woman who coaches prima donnas, "and to think that we never even heard of it before!"
"Peculiar fact," said the New Yorker, striking a match and illuminating the dark, cold interior. "New Yorkers never know anything about New York. You can't sit down in a hotel lobby or in a club and speak of echoes but a dozen men will commence to dilate on some reverberations they have heard in some backwoods German or Italian town. But none of them knows of anything remarkable in his own town, the greatest city on earth."—New York Commercial Advertiser.
