To Restore Flowers to Freshness.

Faded flowers, if not too far gone, may be restored to freshness by this simple process. Place the stems in water near boiling point, and let the flowers remain till the shrivelled petals begin to spread out. Then cut off the stems and put in luke-warm water.

From Aloft.

A child in the midst of a crowd is conscious of nothing but its immediate surroundings Crushed and stifled, it can see and feel only the objects actually touching it But let the father take it up in his arms and hold it aloft. What a difference the elevation will make! So we, too, are in a crowd, in the dark, finding often no meaning in what is stirring round us, but should God deign to raise us to His point of view what a change would come over us!
