A GOOD EXAMPLE.

What is What Every Good Catholic Ought to Be.

Catholics ought all to be good Catholics. They ought to be very exemplary in every department and in every relation of life. Good Catholics are good husbands and fathers, good citizens and neighbors, exemplary business and professional men. It ought to be so with all Catholics. It should be enough on inquiring into the character of a man to say, "Of course he is a good, honest, reliable man—he is a Catholic."

Indeed, worldlings somehow seem to expect it, and when they meet with a nominal Catholic in any department of life who is not up to the mark, who is defective in his moral character, they are disappointed. They may not be able to give an intelligent reason for it, but they have the impression that a member of the Catholic Church ought to be superior to all others. And they are right. The true Christian is the highest style of man and the true Catholic is the true Christian.

The distinguishing characteristic of the good Catholic is that he is strictly conscientious and always acts from principle. His faith is a living faith, and it pervades all his actions. It controls his conduct in every relation of life. He makes no show about it; he is not on exhibition. He is modest and retiring, but in all matters of principle he is firm as the everlasting hills. You always know where to find him; his word is as good as his bond. He is, of course, faithful in all his Christian duties and is always ready for every "good word and work." He commands, without seeking it, the universal respect of his fellow citizens without regard to faith or profession.—Rev. William D. Hickey.

The Wealthiest Church. The wealthiest church in the world, proportionately to its numerical strength, is, perhaps, the Protestant Episcopal Church of Ireland. It has an accumulated fund of close on $40,000,000, while the total number of its adherents, men, women and children, is only a little over half a million. The big fund is mainly the result of the compensation received for being disestablished and disendowed by the Gladstone act of 1870. Before that time and for two centuries previously the "Irish Church," as it was officially designated, though the church of but a small minority of the population, received all the tithes, paid by Catholics as well as Protestants, and thus the Catholic Irish were compelled by law to pay an annual tax for the maintenance of the Protestant Church. The accumulated fund above referred to was therefore to a large extent the money of Catholics, a fact which does not seem to trouble the consciences of the members of the "Church of Ireland," the Anglican sect now styles itself, with as much right to the title as it formerly had to that of "Irish Church."—Catholic Home Companion.

Some people's goodness is so sporadic that they appear to be trying to get to heaven on the installment plan.

No single great deed is comparable for a moment to the multitude of little gentlenesses performed by those who scatter happiness on every side and strew all life with love and good cheer.

Do not for a moment deceive your selves by thinking that venial sins are what are called little sins. There is no such thing as a little sin. Such sins displease God, and can any sin be small that displeases God?

The Catholic University.

The most important of the administrative acts which the trustees of the Catholic university have taken for some time was the decision reached at the recent conference to allow a collegiate course to be opened in the university. The step is a departure from the fundamental purposes upon which the university has been conducted during the past—i. e. the making of the institution a purely postgraduate school. Cardinal Gibbons himself presided at the conference, and the presence of the archbishops who were in Washington for the annual convention gave importance to the meeting.

Accept Your Crosses.

Besides a pure intention a cheerful and willing acceptance of the little crosses which meet us day by day goes far, if we accept them in a loving and expiatory spirit, to redeem the loss of time which, to the eye at least, is one of the least hopeful features of a life in the world.

The Supreme Power.

Nodd—There's no use in talking, the higher education of women is making them more powerful all the time.

Todd—Nonsense! A woman who wields more power than any one I know can neither read nor write.

"Who is she?"

"My cook."—Brooklyn Life.

All Put On.

"Say," remarked little Tommy, who had heard his father and mother discussing investments, "Pa just said something about an 'outside figure,' wonder what that is?"

"Why, ma has one," replied his sister Ethel. "It's the padded one she wears when she goes out."—Philadelphia Press.

The Thirt P's.

"Dis here radium," said Uncle Eben, "may turn a cullud man white, but it can't make a complete job of it unless it kin spoil his appetite for polly, parsons an' possum."—Washington Star.

Students Attention.

Pleasant and very appropriate summer work for seminarians and students is found in enlarging the subscription lists of Catholic papers. There is a good thirty or sixty days work of this kind in the vicinity of your homes or in other localities if you prefer. We make liberal terms for this work. Write us and tell us whether you have done any canvassing, or if new to the business, whether you would like to try it and where you think you can work to the best advantage. Write us fully.

Two former seminarians—now very efficient priests—who spent several of their student vacations in canvassing for The Catholic Journal tell us that it was one of the best experiences they ever had. It made them better acquainted with the people, and the knowledge of parish conditions that they there acquired often serve them most usefully in their higher mission.
