Hits the Nail on the Head.

The Baptist editor of the New York Examiner hits the nail on the head when he says that Catholics go to church for neither a feast nor a concert. In plain English, Catholics do not consider the preacher or singer as of paramount importance in divine worship. What Catholics go to church for is to assist at Mass. It is the great sacrifice of the new law. It appeals to mind and eye and ear and heart. This is what is vital and vitalizing in the Catholic scheme of worship. Catholic Home Companion
