Bernard McDermott of Feera, Caddle, Kilmore, died Aug. 31, aged seventy eight years.

The grazing farm of Aughagowla, comprising sixty acres, near Corrigeenroe was recently split up among the adjoining tenants. The farm, which is of a rich and fattening quality, is on the property of Major French. In June the first step was taken to get it split up, a communication being sent to the agent, Mr. Walpole, and after a favorable reply was received no hitch took place. The engineers of the estates commissioners measured and lock spotted the farm, dividing it equally among the following tenants: P. Pagnum, the herd two parts; J. Hogan, Bernard Lyons, W. Ballantyne, J. Laying, James Flynn, Mrs. J. Hogan and Thomas Higgins. The nine tenants among whom the farm is been split up have agreed to pay $5,000 for their portions. The successful result of the negotiations was due to Mr. Tully, M. P., who explained to agent and tenants their exact position. It is the first grazing farm about Boyle which has been divided among the tenants.

Farrell McDonnell, solicitor, of Abbey street, Roscommon, died Sept. 5, deeply regretted. He represented Roscommon district on the county council, and was its chairman for three years.

SLIGO.—Patrick O'Connell of Ardcotton, Collooney, died Aug. 26, at the fine old age of ninety years. The funeral to Ballysodare cemetery was numerously attended. His demise was deeply mourned by his family and friends in Ireland and in the United States.
