From St. Peters and Paul's Monastery in Cumberland, Md, the following is stated: Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic has been used here by a number of its inmates, with always good result. The severe strain caused by the hard studies falls on those with weak nerves, sometimes causing sleeplessness. A case of this kind of year's standing was cured by three bottles of Tonic. In other cases the Tonic proved very efficacious and all those who took it are pleased with its good effect.

Rev. J. H. Keim, of Bartelso, Ill., informs us that he has used four bottles of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic against sleeplessness and nervousness with good results.

FREE A Valuable Book on Nervous Diseases and a Sample bottle to any address. Poor patients also get the medicine free. Prepared by the Rev. FATHER KOENIG, of Fort Wayne, Ind., since 1876, and now by the BELMONT'S HARDNESS OF HEART.

For aught they knew to the contrary, he might have risen from the ground at their feet, so ignorant were they of his presence till his whining plea for "jest ten cents mister, to buy a bed" struck on their ears Belmont turned sharply, and his answer was a curt refusal, for he hated beggars just one degree more than he did the man who comes to your door with a monstrosity of a clock tucked under his arm and rugs covered with all manner of impossible green and yellow roses draped about his person offering to sell you the same "for $2.49, 50 cents a week, lady." For some inexplicable reason the sight of a rug and clock man headed in his direction always stirred Belmont to a perfect frenzy of impotent rage "D'you s'pose," he was wont to demand indignantly, "the fellow thinks I look like the sort of a chap who could allow things like that on my parlor floor?"

Should the vender of rugs prove importunate, Belmont scrupled not to suggest his speedy departure for a place where, for purpose of warmth, rugs would be entirely superfluous

Only the presence of the girl who walked at Belmont's side saved the beggar from being relegated to the same place of rather more than tropical climate Yer wants allers to tackle a cove what's out with his cap he had once confided to a comrade And in proof of his assertion he displayed almost a double handful of nickels and dimes Now he fixed his red and bleary eyes on Ethel Vernon's pretty face and repeated his whining plea for at Belmont's refusal he had seen her quick gesture toward the purse that hung from her belt

But Belmont's hand closed firmly over the fingers that held the dressed cord and his voice held a ring of command that the beggar did not at present time venture to disregard and he slunk down a convenient alley leaving behind him an odor that was as a breath from a distillery

"I think you're very unkind, Harry," Ethel said and two indignant tears sprang to her lashes The poor man needed the money, any one could see that with half an eye and a dime is such a very little Belmont shrugged "It's not the amount" said he "It's the principle of the thing There are men who will beg just as long as there are men who will give The worst work even when work is offered them But I don't like to see it encouraged in my parish" he added sternly For my part" he went on "I think the world were better off without such men Of what use are they?"

He was met with more mutiny than he was wont to see in the eyes of his parishioners Ethel's eyes flashed and her lips parted to speak Belmont's eyes met hers and he saw that she was angry with him

Now a girl is a queer thing and when she is angry with you she is apt to say and do queer things Ethel's eyes were bright and her cheeks were flushed Belmont's were pale and his lips were set Ethel's hand went to her belt and Belmont's followed it Ethel's fingers closed on the purse and Belmont's closed on Ethel's wrist

Ethel was a girl with a temper and she was not used to having her will crossed Belmont was a man with a will and he was not used to having it crossed
