Good!

It is refreshing, indeed, to read all over the country of protests against the half-baked, ill-digested, quarter-worked-out plan of "higher education" from which all effort, all real disciplinary treatment, all hard work must be eliminated from the kindergarten through the high school.

The JOURNAL has opposed this monstrosity persistently and consistently. It favors all real reform in educational methods and has been ever ready to approve and further any plan which would tend to improve the educational system and plan but it never has been able to convince itself that a hodge-podge of European methods, minus European discipline and strict application of the good old rule that "There is no Royal Road to Learning" ever would work successfully in this country.

Manufacturers and practical men testify that the manual training as taught in the public schools do not tend toward educating the eye and hand of the prospective mechanic. Obviously, this must be so when the instructors, except in rare cases, are only theoretical mechanics and their pupils cannot be expected to rise above the level of their tutors.

We could prolong this list of comparisons but to what avail? Popular sentiment appears to be with the "fads and frills." But it is a healthy sign when politicians like Mayor McClellan make public addresses of which the following paragraph formed a part.

It may possibly serve some mysteriously useful purpose to teach twelve year old boys, who cannot read even the simplest English, to sew buttons on shirts, or to drill girls of the same age, to whom the rule of three is unknown, in the theory, but not in the practice, of music and cooking.

Apparently a strenuous president cannot restrain avaricious subordinates from betraying the public trust reposed in them. But he can and does drive them out from the public service.

What a peculiar compound, William Travers Jerome is, to be sure! And what a great man he might be if he had all his buttons.

Archbishop Farley's firm stand in behalf of the organization of Catholic ladies who propose social ostracism as a penalty for divorced women is likely to have a far-reaching effect.

The modern philosopher's conclusion is that "A man with a strong will can make a woman do anything she wants to."

If the "directory average" be credited there are 2,272,000 persons foolish enough to live in Chicago.

There are persons foolish enough to discuss gravely whether newspapers can be classed as exponents of literature. Of what avail is the opinion of Henry James and William Dean Howells against the ultimatum of such eminent litterateurs as Arthur Brisbane, William R. Hearst, Frank Munsey or Joseph Pulitzer?

Weekly Church Calendar. Sunday July 16—Gospel, St. Matt. v. 20-24—Our Lady of Mt. Carmel.

It is to be regretted that the President was compelled to choose his premier from the ranks of the corporation lawyers but what was the late Inspector Byrnes' theory of ridding Wall Street of dangerous crooks?

revealed by the Eptable scandal, it is not wise to indulge in too many eulogies of public characters until they have stood the test of time and place.

Asininity

By way of press despatches we read of another of those "pokes" played on newly-married couples by fool friends.

This particular form of asininity consisted of "kidnapping" the bride party, locking them in a wild animal cage and placing them on exhibition for two hours and a half.

What delightful "pokes" are there! What a remarkable "poking" is the appropriate substitution of mental and moral faculties must be taken to those of the Apache Indian.

The Western range of tar and to others would appear to fit properly to the perpetrators of such a heinous poke but that is not indicated in the East.

The Hon. El Rumpus was just a trifle too patriotic last week while the Canadian skipper might polish up his manners with considerable of personal advantage to himself.

It is well that one of the roads should revert to its rightful owners, the people. But the other one should come back as well.

Country assemblies are getting themselves re-nominated now. There are no primary days in the rural districts.

One after the other cooperative insurance organizations all over the country are increasing their rates to a figure commensurate with the cost of furnishing and paying insurance.

Why should the United States government mix up in the contest between Church and State in France? asks the Catholic "Union and Times." Why did the government mix up in the Kishineff massacre?

The stock transfer tax has been in operation for more than a month and still Wall Street is doing business.

Have we or have we not 200,000 inhabitants in Rochester? The State census will settle that and its result will be announced soon.

The Hon. William H. Taft begins to realize how Admiral Dewey felt after he gave the house to Mrs. Dewey.

These are the days when the "yellows" are turning their attention to the summer resorts.

We don't realize how many laws are passed by the legislature in annual session until the summer days when the chosen papers use the "session laws" for filling matter and get paid for it.

LaFayette Jerome Lawson, all in side of seventy-two hours. Kansas ever were fond of the strenuous life.

Parents should see to it that their children do not miss mass of vacation.

There is no doubt of Mr. Root's towering ability as a lawyer. Whether his discharge of the duties of Secretary of State will redound to the best interests of the entire people time will tell.

Five Minute Sermon

The Justice of the Pharisees.

Christ commands us to be reconciled to our neighbor whom we have offended as soon as possible, and to give him satisfaction.

The Jews thought they would atone for any sin, even for murder by making an offering in the temple; and Jesus Christ commanded them not to make the offering until they had made peace with their neighbor, which they should do immediately.

We, also, are bound by this command; and hence, if we have either in word or deed offended a person, before we pray or receive the sacraments we should banish from our heart all angry feeling; we should, as soon as possible, give satisfaction and ask pardon of the person offended; and we should show that we entertain no feelings of resentment, and if we have been offended we must be ready to forgive.

We are to learn from this Gospel that to enter into the kingdom of heaven we must have an upright heart animated by charity and subject in all things to the holy law of God, always bearing in mind that true justice does not consist in the external practices of devotion, but rather in the purity of conscience, in the abnegation of our will, and in the control of our passions.

We are also to learn to abstain from any act of anger, and from saying anything that can offend or grieve our neighbor. Lastly, we are to learn not to be slow in making peace with our neighbor whenever we have displeased him, and also not to make a reconciliation difficult.

When it was a crime to celebrate or hear Mass in Ireland. Once upon a time and not so very long ago either it was a crime to celebrate Mass or to hear Mass in Ireland.

Three days after the convention in 1793 had solemnly abolished Christianity in France a procession entered the Cathedral of Notre Dame bearing aloft, seated on a throne, with the crucifix under her feet, the Goddess of Reason, personified by a woman of low character.
