Apply the water with the hands and mop it gently dry. Then take the cream and dab only a little over forehead, cheeks chin and way down to the throat. This done, with the finger tips begin to massage this into the skin, following always the massage principles. Apply more cream if necessary.

Rub from the point of the chin toward each ear to prevent double chin, over the cheeks use a rotary motion, from the corners of the eyes draw gently toward the temples and beginning over the bridge of the nose, the eyebrows back to the temples. This, you see, not only is working the cream into the skin. but at the same time is giving a which is bound to be improving. If one is in a hurry this may be done in five minutes, but take ten when possible. The massage accomplished, more cream is rubbed generously over the face, which is shining and gently burning. Now for fifteen minutes do nothing at all, that is, to the face. This cream bath is to remain on for that length of time and one may either lie down until then or be busy about other parts of dressing. This allows the grease to sink in, reaching the last bit of dust that has crept into

At the end of fifteen minutes wipe off the superfluous paste with a soft cloth, and then have a basin filled with water as hot as can be endured. The face, by the way, can stand a higher temperature than

All hair should so frame the face as to conceal defects and set off its greatest attractions, and the conto ir should be critically examined from every point of view, the back and sides being very important.

There is another point which must not be overlooked; it is essential that the style of hair dressing should suit the figure as well as the shaps of the head.

For instance, a woman with square, broad shoulders and a short neck would look ridiculous with her hair dressed low, although it might be vastly becoming to the head and face, so some happy medium must' pe found, and all these points of face and figure taken into serious

For a long thin face, the arrangement of the hair should be full and round, and, if possible, the coils should just show from behind the ears. The nape of the neck should also be filled as much as possible, and softly waving or curling the hair will improve the appearance.
