Timber Resources in America.
Across the Great Lakes in Canada there lies one of the world's largest reserves of timber, says the Booklover's Magazine. In spite of the tariff imposed, much of this timber is to-day coming to the United States. The forests of the Dominion are beginning to yield abundantly. More than a billion feet of pine saw logs and square timber, during a recent season, were cut upon territory held under timber license from the crown. In the newly developed districts of Aegoma, which are close to the Great Lakes, it is estimated that there are more than a hundred billion cords of spruce and pulp wood, while in the districts of Thunder Bay and Rainy River there are nearly two hundred million cords more.

The Ways of Whales.
Professor Goldlob has been telling the results of his investigations into the migrations of whales. These creatures hang about the coast of Norway and Finland until the spring is well advanced, and then go away on their travels. Some go to the Azores, others to Bermuda and the Antilles, and they cover these enormous distances in an incredibly short time. Some of them bring back harpoons which bear the names of ships and other evidences of where these migrants have been for their summer holidays.

ILL EFFECT OF LARGE HATS.

Prominent Physician Says They Hurt the Head and Spine.
There is no doubt in my mind that heavy hats, fastened to the heads as they are nowadays are largely responsible for the almost universal "headache" among women of the civilized nations who wear such head coverings.

Is it surprising that a heavy hat, held fast to the scalp by long hat pins, should cause a pain in the head? Just think of the exertion necessary to balance such headgear, especially the styles with the big overhanging rims in front. The center of gravity in such a pattern is changed from the crown to the middle of the rim, and just imagine how much juggling it takes to keep such a one in place. To keep it at the correct angle the muscles at the sides of the neck are on a constant tension to hold the head high and stiff, while those in the forehead that must support the bulk of the weight are so continually strained that they develop wrinkles, and all because styles demand that a big brimmed bonnet be worn in an unnatural position. The muscles thus strained to keep the hat on are not able to resist the weight of it, as they should, and the most of it thus falls on the spinal column, frequently causing a dull ache in the head. Big hats should be avoided on winter days, for they are twisted and awry about and pull so hard on the hair that the roots are strained, the scalp becomes irritated and many times they bring on headaches.

Small turbans or bonnets are the cause of almost as many headaches, for they frequently weigh more than big hats. The only advantage they have is the lack of a brim, and the fact that they are a little more comfortable because they sort of fit down over the head, and keeping them in place requires no exertion.

The headress our women wear is simply monstrous, and if they had not been trained from infancy to wear some kind of headgear do you think they could bear the weight of a four pound hat, built up like a mound on their heads? I have noticed since these unusually big styles have been worn that many otherwise beautiful women have developed a habit of drooping the head or bending it slightly to one side, as if to balance the extra amount of hat trimming, and many actually have rounded shoulders from persistently carrying about an abnormal weight before they were sufficiently trained with wearing medium sized headgear. If no other argument appeals to women to lay aside heavy hats, the fact that they cause the hair to fall out should do so. No air can get through these big thick frames, and closeness to the roots is bad for the scalp.—New York Telegram.

BOUDOIR SECRETS.
Hollow cheeks are often induced by nervousness.

Salt has both cleansing and healing power, and is, therefore, an excellent application for superficial ulcers.

Mechanical massage will reduce the chin, and the little device that comes for the correction of a double chin.

Cloths wet with alcohol and water or laudanum and water and laid on a hot water bottle will relieve neuralgia when the painful part is steamed over the bottle covered with the cloth.

To preserve a good complexion never wash the face with hard water. If natural soft water cannot be obtained throw a little oatmeal in the water used.

Singers cannot sing so well after a fit of anger.

Shortage of Gasoline.
Users of gasoline are becoming alarmed at the increasing demand for the product and the consequent increase in price. The Standard Oil Company, the chief producer, has sounded a warning against its indiscriminate use for power and heating where other products of petroleum will do as well. The great increase in the use of gasoline has come with the development of the automobile, the motor boat, and the small power engine.

A few years ago gasoline was an insignificant by-product in the refining of petroleum for which there was practically no market. Today, even at the high prices which it commands, it does not pay to produce it other than as a by-product. In the refining process from 8 to 12 per cent of various naphthas are produced, and from this about 50 per cent of gasoline can be refined, so that the maximum of gasoline which can be produced from petroleum is from 4 to 6 per cent. The refiners are overstocked with kerosene, paraffine, and lubricating oils.

Saved by American Capital.
Were there no United States would English society be solvent? That question has never yet been asked or examined. Several millions have been brought into our society during the last forty years by American heiresses, and an enormous sum has been received in exchange for land, paintings, engravings, old furniture, works of art, jewels, plate and books.

Moreover, American capital has been invested in this country mostly through the intervention of titled Englishmen, who, of course, have generally benefited by the transaction. Probably five hundred million dollars has come to the West End through these various transactions. Would the West End have been bankrupt had not that sum been procurable?—London Graphic.

Height and Weight of Women.
After taking measurements of the height of women in France, England, and America, a doctor announces that the English woman is the tallest and the American comes next. The average height of the French woman is 5 feet 1 inch. The American woman is nearly two inches taller, and the women of Great Britain half an inch taller than the latter. American women, however, weigh slightly more than either of the others, their average weight being about 117 pounds.—Exchange.

Nowadays, more than ever, perhaps, women need to remember that their best and most beautiful work is to be done in their own homes.

A wife should not degenerate into a merely superior sort of maid of all work; but at the same time she should not despise the social, moral and spiritual influence that she may exercise by ruling her household wisely.
