CRUELTY OF RUSSIAN REFUGEES

Statistics Show, After Escaping Oppression, They Are Worst Oppressors.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals last year recorded the nationality of all persons arrested for inhumanity, says the N. Y. Globe. The figures detract much sympathy from the oppressed Russian peasant who seeks refuge in America. They seem to reveal the fact that oppression is a trait permeating the whole of Russian society.

The downtrodden Russian for whom world-wide pity is expressed is according to the society's experience, without pity himself. He is the chief offender toward animals in New York, and heads all foreign nationalities. The figures, now for the first time made public, are:

Russian, 121; Italian, 88; German, 56; Irish, 47; Austrian, 18; French, 2, and others, 92.

Americans, being in tenfold population, and including children of naturalized foreigners, number 329.

Instances are told of the chief offenders inflicting the most unspeakable cruelty upon animals such as pulling out tongues and literally clubbing horses to death. Meat cleavers and adzes as instruments of torture have been taken from the ruffians who excite the pity of the whole world for the official oppression from which they flee to America.

It is a common thing to arrest a Russian in the act of beating the animal with a rung from the cart or a cobble stone from the street.

As merchants their methods of carrying young calves and other animals to market and binding their mouths led to special legislation.

The lack of sanitary care taken of their animals has led to glanders and farcy. When worn out the animals were permitted to die of starvation.
