RAREFIED AIR FROM CAVES.

Replaces Air of High Altitudes in Treatment of Consumption.

Heretofore, victims of pulmonary complaints have been obliged to make inconvenient journeys to the higher altitudes in search of the pure rarefied air which is known to be so beneficial to them, but this is no longer necessary. It has been discovered that the air from limestone caves has all the characteristics of that of the mountains. This discovery has just been made use of in the location of a sanitarium near one of these caves, and the air for the institution is supplied from the underground caverns. This establishment is at Luray, Va., and the system of ventilation is arranged so that each room gets its own supply direct from the cave. The air of these caverns is of a very uniform temperature and remarkably pure and free from all germs and dust particles. In the warmest weather the doors and windows of this institution are kept closed, and a comfortable temperature of seventy-five degrees is maintained in spite of one of ninety or more encountered outside.

USE OF PEN NAMES.

Some Cognomens of Famous Male and Female Writers.

Following is a list of the pen names of some famous authors: "Mrs. Partington," B. P. Shillaber; "Jenny June," Mrs. J. C. Croly; "Grace Greenwood," Mrs. S. J. C. Lippincott; "The Marvel," Donald C. Mitchell; "Josh Billings," H. W. Shaw; "A. L. O. E.," (a lady of England), Mrs. C. Tucker; "Eli Perkins," M. D. Landon; "Fanny Fern," Mrs. James Parton; "Gail Hamilton," Mary A. Dodge; "Artemus Ward," Charles F. Browne; "Gath," George Alfred Townsend; "Bill Nye," Edgar William Nye; "George Sand," Mme. Dudevant; "Boz," Charles Dickens; "Sam Slick," Judge T. C. Halliburton; "George Elliot," Mary Ann Evans or Mrs. G. H. Lewes or Miss Cross; "Timothy Titcomb," Dr. J. H. Holland; "Susan Coolidge," Miss Woolsey; "Mark Twain," Samuel L. Clemens; "Klickerbocker," Washington Irving; "Max Adler," C. H. Clark; "Petroleum V. Nasby," D. R. Locke; "Ouida," Louise de la Ramée; "Nym Crinkle," A. C. Wheeler; "Oliver Optic," William T. Adams; "Porte Crayon," D. H. Strother; "H. H.," Helen Hunt; "Shirley Dare," P. C. Dunning.

Encouraging an Industry.

An act passed in the time of King Charles II of England, "for the encouragement of the woollen manufactures of this kingdom and the prevention of the exportation of the monies thereof for the buying and importing of linen," provided that "from and after the five and twentieth day of March, in the year of our Lord, one thousand six hundred and sixty-seven, no person or persons whatsoever shall be buried in any shirt, shift, or sheet made of or mingled with flax, hempe, silke, haire, golde, or silver, or other than what shall be made of wool only." There was one exception to the rule. A person dying of the plague was permitted to be buried in a linen shroud. Otherwise penalty had to be paid, $25 for each offense. The act was repealed in the reign of King George III.

First Land Sale.

The first sale of land of which there is any definite record is that mentioned in the twenty-third chapter of Genesis. The transaction seems to have been very simple. Abraham wished to buy a field for a burial place for his family. Ephron, the owner of the field, valued it at 400 shekels of silver, about $200 of our money, which Abraham agreed to pay. He accordingly went to the gate of the city and weighed the money, which he paid in the presence of all who entered through the gate. This simple ceremony, without the intervention of lawyers or other officials, made "the field and the cave that was therein and all the trees that were in the field, and in all the borders around about," sure unto Abraham for a possession.

Hot Meal Without Fire.

Readers of the war news will notice one or two references to the fact that tinned meats for the Russian troops are prepared by a process which enables the contents of each tin to be served hot without a fire. This boon is secured by having the ordinary tin filled with food "jacketed" in patent tins. The patent tin contains water, together with a chemical mixture, by means of which the water can be raised to boiling point in ten minutes or a quarter of an hour. All that it is necessary to do when it is desired to heat the food is to puncture the top of the patent tin, the chemical mixture being thereby forced into the water, which soon begins to boil.

Memento Hunters in Palestine.

Palestine, it is said, is being depolled by tourists. A scientist writes: "Many of these visitors are mere 'trippers,' with no real interest or knowledge of the history of Palestine, as the astounding questions they propound to residents abundantly prove. But all are eager to possess at any price, however exorbitant, what they call 'curios' or mementos of their excursion. To meet this demand a tribe of dealers has sprung up all over the country each employing an army of agents who ride everywhere, east and west of the Jordan, encouraging the natives to tear in pieces tombs that otherwise might have awaited scientific examination in comparative safety."

What They Ate and Drank.

Present day authors are not such epicures as were some of their illustrious predecessors. Indeed, some of them are abstemious to a fault. Of such is Count Leo Tolstoy, the famous Russian writer, who never touches alcohol and eats sparingly of a vegetarian diet.

Of Pope, poet and epicure, it is recorded that he would lie in bed for days at Lord Bolingbroke's unless he were told there were stewed lampreys for dinner. On learning of this he would arise at once and go down to partake of his favorite dish.

Charles Lamb, most lovable of essayists, had a weakness for roast pig. He also delighted in a draught of porter served in pewter, and many great men did he invite to join him in a pot of this beverage at his favorite resort, a snug little inn at Edmonton.

Lord Byron loved the good things of the table, but at one period of his life he dined four days a week on fish and vegetables, and "wined" on a pint of claret. After starving himself into an unnatural thinness he took freely of wine and Holland gin, of which latter it is recorded he consumed a pint almost every night. At Newstead abbey he used a drinking cup formed of a human skull.

The brilliant Sheridan is said to have written one of his plays, "Pizarro," over claret and sandwiches in Drury Lane theater. He was of the opinion that when an idea was reluctant a glass of port would ripen it, and that when it came freely a glass of port was a glorious reward for it.

Throughout his life Dr. Johnson had an extreme partiality for a leg of mutton. He writes: "At my Aunt Furd's I ate so much of a boiled leg of mutton that she used to talk about it. My mother, who was affected by little things, told me seriously that it would hardly ever be forgotten." On another occasion a friend treated the genial doctor to new honey and dotted cream. He was so much of this that he was afterwards so much of his making himself seriously ill. He was also very fond of tea.

Feilding, the author of "Tom Jones," liked a good table, and declared that in glasses of brandy and water he found consummate bliss.

As a regular beverage Goldsmith drank a straight decoction of sassafras which in his time was regarded as an excellent purifier of the blood. His supper was never anything more substantial than a dish of boiled milk. Still more meagre was the poet Milton's last meal of the day that is, if a pipe and tobacco and a glass of water, which he took just before going to bed, can be called a meal.

Two hundred years ago, in designing an invitation to a choice supper, Dryden wrote as follows to a lady: "If beggars might be choosers, a chine of honest bacon would please my appetite more than all the marrow puddings, for I like them better plain, having a very vulgar stomach."

Bread and water and vegetables constituted the diet of Sir Isaac Newton when writing his "Principia," and he ate very sparingly even of that—so sparingly, in fact that he sometimes inquired if he had dined.

The delicacies of the table possessed no attractions for Shelley, who was of the firm belief that animal food was detrimental to the intellectual faculties.

What the Egg Represents.

The first Christian Church in Egypt adopted the egg of the ostrich as symbolic of faith, and the custom is still observed to this day in the East. Before the high altar, with its six silver lamps, ostrich eggs are suspended in the form of a wreath, some of them without ornamentation and others containing the most exquisite designs.

In the countries bordering on the northern coast of Africa ostrich eggs are also held sacred for purposes of worship, and they are ornamented in various ways and form a part of church and house decoration.

The confectionery stores are displaying some striking novelties for Easter.

How He Got the Moon.

John Henry Maedler, the astronomer, whose favorite study was the moon, having learned that Frau Witte, the wife of the state councillor, owned a wonderful model of his pet luminary, spent years in trying to gain possession of it. As her husband was living he could not marry the owner of the model, so he married her daughter and at the death of his mother-in-law the coveted moon became his.

Will Fight to a Finish The Law Laughed At

There are certain laws governing the actions of men in what ever walk of life they may find their steps leading them. There are laws for the controlling of the mind; laws for the protection of the person and laws for the safe guarding of property. For a long time past it seems that the predominating law governing mercantile life has borne the title: "How Much Profit Can Be Extracted?" We take an exception" and "move to amend" by our policy of selling Suits, Topcoats and Raincoats from $8 to $15 that will "strike out" the above title and insert the caption: "How Much Profit May We Distribute Among Our Customers in Order to Gain More Trade?" This policy we will fight to the finish, and we cannot but laugh with pleasure at the entire satisfaction it is bringing to our rapidly-increasing number of patrons.

Didn't it make you feel just a little bit envious when, last Sunday you saw him basking in the sunny smiles of her who thought him the "best ever" in his well fitting, neat appearing suit? Now we're going to let you into the secret. The whole outfit cost him but $18. He paid but $10 for that elegant covert coat at our No. 276 Main street store, while the Fancy Worsted that she thought was custom-made only "stood" him $8. Don't let him get the best of you. There are more of them left at both stores, No. 92 State street and No. 276 Main street east—and don't forget the old adage—"Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady."

They made a most strenuous protest when we told them that we wanted twelve more cases of that light underwear to sell for 30 cents—yet you know, those that we offered last week in all the summery colors—the quality selling generally for 50 cents the garment. But we told the manufacturers that it was a case of urgent necessity—that the trade demanded them—that it was a question of "meet" we received them and they are ready for you together with the 30 cent kind for 22 cents.

He's getting just a little bit unreliable, this Mr. Weather Prognosticator of ours. When you least expect it, down comes a deluge of April showers.

that threaten your health; make you feel "sticky," and leave your suit looking like an accordion. There's an unfailing way in which to circumvent his foxiness. A Raincoat—we'll take delight in helping you get the best of him for but $8.

It's Moving-Time, My Brother. And Before It is Too Late. Move into a "Gardiner" Worsted. It will Cost You Only "Eight."

Here beginneth the burning of the brush. Now don't think for a moment we mean the clothes brush as connected with our Hard Worsted Suits from $8 to $15. Of course, they don't require much brushing, but we had particular reference to the clearing up of the garden. The last word—so suggestive of Gardiner's—where satisfied customers may raise a $12.50 Fancy Worsted Suit by only planting $9.50.

Have you seen the new conceit in neckwear—the "Chauncey Olcotts"—selling for but 22 cents? They are the "topper offs" to an "Old Hickory" Royal Blue Dye Serge Suit at $9.50. You remember the kid with which we challenged comparison with the regular $14 grade. The "Chauncey Olcotts" and "topper offs" go to form a most irresistible combination.

We've been rather silent for the past few days regarding the 47 cent Union Label Shirt question. There was method in our "mum-keeping" for the reason that we were going so fast we thought discretion the better part of valor. A new conignment has brought us out of the woods so consequently we can now "bother" as loudly as we wish. However, their splendid quality and patterns call their own attractions in stentorian tones.

Soon the "Locust" Will Be Singing in the Sumner's Near day Heat. Thirteen cent Police suspenders Values Might Hard to Beat.
