The Miraculous Draught of Fishes

The ship spoken of in to-day's Gospel belonged to St. Peter, and St. Ambrose says that it is the same which St. Matthew speaks of as tossed about by a furious tempest, and St. Luke in this day's Gospel describes as overloaded with fishes. From this ship Christ taught the people; from it He commanded the wind and the waves; from it, although asleep, He saved the apostles from drowning. It is, therefore, a figure of the Catholic Church, of which St. Peter and his legitimate successors are the visible head and foundation.

We are to learn from the events recorded in this Gospel to be anxious to hear the word of God. From St. Peter we are to learn to obey Jesus Christ, and to humble ourselves, having our unworthiness before our eyes, when God favors us and makes us the instruments of His wonders. From the apostles, who abandoned their ships and nets, we are to learn to abandon the things of the world, to give up our affections, even our own selves, in order to follow the voice of God when He vouchsafes to call us. Since Jesus Christ has sufficiently instructed the world, He has in a certain sense finished His discourse, so far as we are concerned let us, therefore, launch out into the deep; let us work, and, disengaging our hearts from the world, follow our Master on the way to heaven.

Rev. Hyacinth M. Cormier, Master General of the Dominicans, who celebrated the golden jubilee of his admission to priesthood on May 17th, was not expected to live long when he was ordained a priest and later when admitted into the order.

Henry Cormier was born at New Orleans December 8, 1832. On May 17, 1866, he received priesthood, by dispensation, as he was not yet twenty-four.

He immediately chose to enter the Order of St. Dominic, but it was very doubtful for a long time whether he could realize his hope. His health was so very delicate that he seemed unable to bear the austerities of the religious life.

He had frequent hemorrhages and a delay of two years was required to see whether his health would improve. Then the Pope consented to his admission, provided at least a month should elapse between his attacks of illness.

Once twenty-nine days passed without a return of the trouble and Plus IX yielded his consent. Father Hyacinth, which name he had taken, was professed at Santa Sabina in Rome, May 23, 1859.

In a recent sermon, Archbishop Ireland expressed himself as follows on the subject of education:

Schools and colleges where the mind is solely cared for cannot suffice for the education of the children of the land. For the masses of those children, the home and the Sunday school do not apply the moral training refused them in schools and colleges. The problem facing the country is awful in its portents—what is to happen as the result of the lack of moral training in schools and colleges frequented by the multitude of its children? They who give thought to the problem are affrighted, and well they may be. Remedies are proposed; but the sole remedy that is effective is feared and shunned—the inculcation of religion in the schools and colleges. Moral training, it is admitted, should be sought, but it must be such that religion be not evoked to define and enforce its teachings. But morality without God is void of force, as it is void of sanction.

Right education of girls rests four-square on physical, mental, artistic and moral training. That such training is given at St. Mary's College and Academy, Notre Dame, Indiana, is unhesitatingly conceded by those acquainted with this magnificent institution. The advertisement given in another column barely calls attention to the education there imparted, to its splendid equipment, its location, its general material advantages. To know its spirit, its idea of education, visit the school or send for a Year-book.

The University of Notre Dame, it appears, has some features that can not be duplicated in any other school. It is one of the old, well-established colleges, with settled traditions reaching back sixty-four years, with a distinguished staff of professors and excellent library and laboratory equipment. Its discipline is of the paternal kind,—strong without being oppressive; and as it embraces in its scope the grammar school, high school and college work, its appeal is as broad as it is potent. Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the famous Indiana University, however, is the fact that it has arrived at its present marvelous development absolutely without eulogium. An announcement of the courses provided at Notre Dame appears on another page.

COOK OPERA HOUSE.

For next week the Moore Stock Company will offer as its Fourth of July attraction, the well known Civil War Play, "Cumberland 61." It is rated as one of the best of the modern plays, based on the war of the Rebellion. A spectacular scene is that in which the fire is seen in a deep gorge, over which a frail wooden bridge is stretched. It is said that this is a particularly difficult effect to obtain, and it is necessary to convey to the spectator's eye the effect of depth, and at the same time show the brilliant flames of the conflagration. Miss Willette Kershaw the new leading woman and Bertram Lytell will play the principle parts. Next Monday afternoon, Miss Lillian Sinnott, the new ingenue will make her first appearance with the company. Matinees on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

DARWINISM.

The Catholic Church and the Theory of Evolution.
Every now and then some reader writes the Catholic editor for information on Darwinism and the Church's attitude toward that teaching.
There are books from Catholic pens such as Mivart's "Genesis of Species," Dr. Zahm's "Evolution and Dogma," Father Wasmann's "Modern Biology and the Theory of Evolution" and recently "The Attitude of Catholics toward Darwinism and Evolution," by Father H. Muckermann, S. J. And there are numerous articles on the topic in such Catholic periodicals as the American Catholic Quarterly Review and the Messenger. We note particularly some recent contributions from the pen of Dr. James J. Walsh.

If Darwinism be understood in its limited sense, the theory of "natural selection," many Catholic writers do not regard it as necessarily opposed to Catholic teaching. But Darwinism in this sense is said to be in process of rejection by the scientific world. The theory of natural selection has not successfully weathered the discussion of forty years.

Darwin followed his volume, "The Origin of Species" (1859) with another on "The Descent of Man" (1871), in which what is popularly known as the common descent of man and monkey is asserted. St. George Mivart considered even this theory under certain qualifications as not necessarily opposed to Catholic teaching. But the weight of Catholic opinion is otherwise. Haeckel's "Monism," which is a further generalization of Darwinism, is undoubtedly atheistic.

Is the Catholic Church opposed to evolution? No, unless you define evolution in an atheistic and atheistic way. Evolution is a broader term than Darwinism, and it applies to a wider category of facts than animal or plant development. We may speak of the evolution of government and civilization as well as evolution in nature.—Catholic Citizen.

SHORT SERMONS.

Let us bear the cross. Our greatest cross is ourselves.

Service—this is the keynote of Christian life. It is by service that we purge away the dross.

Be at peace with all your brethren. Let your love for them suffer no alteration. Maintain an inexhaustible fund of goodness, patience and gentleness.

God alternately conceals and reveals Himself in order the better to be seen. His silence enhances the effect of His words. It was His burial that gave credit to His resurrection.

Happily the world will be judged by an all wise and all knowing God and not by a select committee of the ungodly. To God alone all hearts are open, all secrets are known.

We do job printing of all kinds at reasonable rates. Call and see our samples and get prices.

A Mystery Explained.

One of the strangest of stories of false imprisonment comes from France. A woman was sentenced to imprisonment for life for having caused the death of her husband and brother. The three had lived together at Malaunay, near Rouen, in a cottage, the lower part of which was used as a winery. When the woman was sent to prison other people took the winery, but the new tenants suffered, the man from falling fits, his wife from nausea, from which she died. Another bought the cottage, but they too were overcome by the "spell of the accursed place," as they thought it. They were subject to fainting and loss of memory. At last a scientific examination of the premises was made. Then it was found that a lime kiln adjoined the inn. In the wall dividing it from the cottage were many fissures, so that whenever lime was burnt monoxide of carbon escaped into the inn. This was the secret of the deaths for which the woman was suffering. She was brought out of prison after six years of servitude.

The Quality of a Mirror.

In the mirrors of to-day the light is reflected by a layer of silver or an amalgam of tin, but a proportion of light is lost in the process of reflection and the image is less luminous than the original. The value of a looking glass is usually estimated by the thickness of the glass, because the thicker it is the stronger it must be. But, speaking scientifically, thick glasses are defective because the outlines of the image reflected are less clearly defined.

Sex and Occupation.

It is curious, but true, that the two occupations longest identified with the female sex—cooking and dressmaking—should each of them be better performed by men.—Grand Magazine.

Rose water, eight ounces, and tincture of benzoin, two drams, make one of the best skin tonics and whiteners.
