COOK OPERA HOUSE.

A quaint rural play, "New England Folks" is to be offered next week by the Moore Stock Company at the Cook Opera House. This is a play that pictures life along the picturesque and likable people of a small New England village. The scenes are laid in Berkshire, Mass., on the farm of Consider Morton, and part of the action takes place in New York City. The play has a wealth of interesting dramatic incidents, expressed in scenes that are said to hold one's close interest. A pretty grain of sentiment and a streak of odd fun relieve the serious interests. Bert Lytell will impersonate Joe Morton, a farmer lad, who is the main figure in the play. The other members of the company will have character parts that will afford an opportunity for excellent acting. Matinees on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.
