See What
$1.00
Will Buy

We have abandoned our price tables this year, having found it more satisfactory and convenient for customers to see the different lines at their various prices without going from one part of the store to another. Under our present plan the different lines are divided into departments, so that all styles of any article can be shown at one counter and by the salesperson in charge.

The following list of articles priced at one dollar will be found useful to many who desire to pay just that sum for a gift, but who are undecided as to what to choose.

- Shopping Bags
- Wellesly Bags
- Ladies' Pocketbooks
- Ladies' Purses
- Men's Pocketbooks
- Men's Purses
- Card Cases
- Bill Books
- Letter Books
- Umbrellas

Five Minute Sermon

John Bears Witness to Christ

St. John informed the Jews of the nature of his mission, and directed their attention to the prophecy of Isaiah which foretold his coming, by quoting the words of the prophet: "Speak to the heart of Jerusalem, with the Lord, and call aloud to her to be comforted, My people, for your evil is come to an end. Then shall he heard a voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight His paths." He also gave them a striking proof of his great humility, for though promised by an angel, born by a prodigy of the Most High, and sanctified before his birth by the presence of the Redeemer, yet he merely says of himself: "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness."

We should learn to practise humility as St. John did, by confessing sincerely our nothingness, by not sounding our own praises even when there may be occasion to do so without danger of ostentation, and by suffering with patience injurious words even when performing faithfully our duties.

PAID FLOWER GIRLS VOEGE OF THE PLUME

THE ART OF PERFUMING ONE'S HOUSE AND GARMENTS. WHEN IN SEASON FASHION SEND PRICES UP 300 PER CENT.

It is a Fad in England and One Result is the Flower Garden Girl—She and Her Belongings Are Laden With the Odors of Flowers.

This young woman calls herself a perfume girl. Her mission is to carry into the home the scents of the flower garden. She writes:

"There is no need of trying to scent a house all in a day, nor is there any use of trying to scent one's robes all in an hour. Scent in the house is like spice in the cake. It takes days and days for it to ripen and it takes weeks and weeks to mature."

"There are only a few scents that are good in a hurry. Orris is clean and sweet smelling and desirable always, and the ready-made perfumes are always available, but the woman who is going to carry around with her a lot of garments all beautifully and tastefully scented must manage in some other manner."

"Those who visited the living rooms of the Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim were struck with the delicious atmosphere. The building was musty enough, but within the apartments of the Duchess all was entirely different. The reason is not far to seek."

"Standing in one corner of a hallway leading into the boudoir of the Duchess was a Japanese jar, shoulder high. It was brought from Tokio filled with the scents of the Orient."

"The foundation for these scents is the rose. Each morning it is wheeled into the room and is stirred from the very bottom, until the atmosphere is filled with the perfume. The scents are so well selected that, no matter how much perfume is set free in the room, the odors never grow heavy."

"The Duchess had a fad for perfuming each room differently. One of her living rooms was filled with the perfume of Virginia jasmine, while another was scented with Newport honeysuckle."

"To be a true flower garden girl you must make a study of perfumes and you must be able to combine them just right. That is the real secret of it all."

"The real secret of the perfumed atmosphere lies in one's locks and in one's lingerie, and also in one's bath."

"There is a girl who takes a bath daily in a tub into which there has been dropped one scented tablet. There is another girl who pours a cup of home made perfume in her tub before letting the hot water run into it."

"When partly full she adds a handful of pine needles sewn in a bag and she stirs in some orris powder. It makes a very sweet bath."

"I make a little scented cap for fastidious young women to wear. They put it on at night to scent the locks. It makes the hair deliciously sweet."

"Sweet smells are hypnotic. It is marvelous what one can do with them."

"I had a case not long ago of a girl who loved a man and was not loved in return."

"Let me make a flower garden girl of you," ventured I one day when she had sent for me to make some sachet bags for her."

"How?" she asked.

"Let me show you," said I. And I did."

"I scented the atmosphere of her drawing room. Her parlor was filled with rugs that were musty with age, and I perfumed them even as they do in Turkey."

"The smell was penetrating and delightful. It was of the very finest and sweetest aromas of Arabia. Then I scented her hair and taught her how to scent her skin."

"Take a pitcher of water," said I, "and put some perfume in it. Then pour in some boiling water. Let it cool and use this for a face bath. Let your hands soak in it. Perfume your skin."

"Then I experimented with her bodices. It was a strange thing to do, but I had read in an Arabian book of an attar, which is called in the original Arabian the attar of love."

"I investigated it, had it analyzed and found it to be pure Turkish attar of rose, costing thirty cents a drop."

"Buy six drops," said I, "and make it last by putting it in alcohol."

"She took my advice. Then I poured the whole upon absorbent cotton and put it all where it would do the most good to the bodices."

"And such a sweet odor. It was like all the roses that were ever seen all gathered together. I also put a little perfume fountain in her parlor. Two weeks later her engagement was announced."

Feather Which Sets Off Woman's Face Best in Great Demand for Millinery—Why New York Women Pay Higher Prices for Hats.

"The ostrich feather as a hat trimming is unrivalled," said a New York milliner. "Gainsborough knew what he was about when he adorned the heads of his sitters with luxuriant ostrich feathers."

"Lop off the plumes from some of this season's hats and the result would be awful. Take this, for example, and an elongated turban of black felt was held up trimmed at one side with three long, green ostrich plumes which swept towards the back, the longest when it reached the wearer's shoulder curling back up toward the ear. The thing was stunning, and so was the price—$50."

"Without the ostrich plumes," the milliner explained, "that shape is very trying. But with the plumes a very plain, dowdy looking person soon might wear it and look stylish and almost pretty."

"Oh, no, $50 is not high for a hat with plumes. Frequently the ostrich feathers alone on some of this season's hats have cost $60, $75 and $85, and prices sometimes go up because some customers are so particular."

"New York women pay far higher prices now than ten years ago. Some women wear hats almost all day long, spending the day shopping, luncheon, calling, driving, etc., without intermission. Naturally the hat is almost the most important feature of their costume, and in order to keep its looks it must be of good quality. I have customers who without a hat are quite ordinary looking, and in a certain style of hat are considered beauties. That's the main reason why the New York woman keeps her hat on at luncheons."

"Ninety per cent. or more of the ostrich feathers used in this country come from Africa," said he, "and they are sold at auction in the London market to the highest bidders before crossing the ocean."

"There is no fixed market price for ostrich feathers, the price varying with the demand. At present we are using twice as many feathers as we used in a few years past."

"There are about 360,000 birds in Africa, and from 15,000 to 17,000 in this country, and of the whole supply which reaches the United States it is safe to say that New York city alone uses one-half."

"There are women who don't know that the long feathers are confined to the end of the wings. Any length of feather can of course be made by piecing short feathers together, but the choicest long ones have an unbroken quill, the maximum length of which is about twenty-four inches."

"But the beauty of a feather and its cost depend more on its width, on the length and thickness of its fine or strands than on the length of its quill."

"To some extent every feather is made, even the handsomest being fortified with two additional feathers underneath making three layers in all; and five or six layers are sometimes needed to give the tip the very thick, luxuriant effect so much admired."

"A single ostrich feather is very scant and slim, indeed, and no woman would look twice at one. Preparing the feather is everything."

"From first to last an ostrich feather passes through nearly one hundred different hands before being delivered to the retailers."

"A profitable business to the ostrich farmer? Yes, indeed. The middle man and retailer don't make all the money, by a long sight."

"The average matured bird yields from $30 to $60 in feathers a year and his keep doesn't amount to much. Average this sum up at $40 per head and Africa's 360,000 birds will give something like $14,400,000 a year."

To Clean a Lace Yoke. Many people are puzzled by the problem of how the lace yoke of a gown may be cleaned without detaching it from the bodice. If it is washed in the ordinary way by dipping it into a basinful of soapuds, the almost inevitable result is that of wetting the material of the gown, the color of the latter staining the lace, says Woman's Life.

By far the best result, however, may be gained by first rolling a corner of a bath towel into a thick pad and placing this under the lace.

A brush or cloth should then be dipped in a good lather and dabbed over the yoke, the lace, meanwhile, being well squeezed between the fingers. If this is repeated with fresh soap once or twice, and a dry piece of towel substituted when the original corner is saturated, the cloth or silk of which the bodice is made will be kept perfectly dry.

Teatable Lore. When the tea has been made and the maker has forgotten to put on the lid for a few minutes it is a sure sign that a visitor will drop in to tea.

When a person helps herself to cream before sugar she will be crossed in love.

A tea leaf floating in the cup of an unmarried lady is a sign that she has an admirer, says Home Notes.

If a person accidentally receives two spoons in a cup of tea she will be married within a year.
