The Bishop made short addresses before and after the ceremonies, in which he congratulated the children in being so fortunate to receive the Sacrament. "This city is full of children," he said, "who don't know what the Sacrament of Confirmation is. This city is full of children who never received the Sacrament of Baptism, who don't know anything about prayer. You are more fortunate than they are, you have Catholic parents, Catholic schools and priests, who teach you our Catholic faith. I want you to remember this day as long as you live, your parents remember the day of their confirmation. I remember mine, 72 years ago the 8th day of November next I received my confirmation in a little church. I remember the aisles, the cold, unheated little church." He then expressed his hopes that the children will live up to their religion as long as they live, and be good Catholic Christians. The ceremonies were closed by the whole congregation singing the Te Deum.

A proof of the pew rent list will be found in the vestibule of the church next Sunday.
