PREPARE FOR A COLD WINTER

These sharp nights and windy days remind us that Winter is nearly here. Now is the time to come in and buy Blankets, Rugs, Heaters and Ranges—all the things needed to keep you comfortable during the cold nights to come.

The carpenters and paperers are still working in the windows, but behind them we are all busy.

Night Comforts

Pillows

A large size 22x28 pillow, mixed feathers, put in extra fine feather ticking (feathers can't work out) great value, special at $1.50 a pair.

Or, if you want a finer grade take our "Michigan" pillows, with special ventilating appliance, and three pounds of pure mixed duck and geese feathers, steam cured and orderless, at $3.75 a pair.

Bed Spreads

We have a few beautiful, white figured Bed Spreads, full size, with long white fringe, for only $2.25.

Comforts

Full size, thick, heavy puffed Comforts that make you feel warm just to look at them, for $1.25 to $2.25.

It pays for itself in less than a year and then does half your kitchen work for rest of your lifetime for nothing.

But don't expect this sort of service if you buy one of those bargain cabinets that fall to pieces in time, and are a nuisance instead of a help. The genuine McDougall Cabinet costs perhaps a little more than the cabinets that are sometime offered by inexperienced manufacturers, but if you see the McDougall once you won't be apt to buy any other.

There is no room in the house where a piece of furniture is tested as hard as in the kitchen—thick steam one day, hot dry air the next, cold often—all sorts of conditions which go to warp and get out of shape a piece of furniture that is not built of the very best seasoned material, and in the most workmanlike manner.

Don't blame the inexperienced manufacturer for not making as good a cabinet as the McDougall—they don't know how—but the safe thing to do is to buy the genuine McDougall.

We have all styles, and prices range from $18.00 to $28.00.

If you can't come to-day, the next best thing is to come to-morrow. Come anyhow, even if you don't expect to buy a thing. We want to show you the store, and we'll take the chance of your telling everyone you know of its beauty and originality.

HER MORNING TOILET

EMPEROR OF CHINA IN DOUGHERT WITH GREAT CELEBRITY

Official Necessary To Paint and Powder Her Throat Before the Imperial Ideal Is Reached—The Toilet Room Relieved By Song and Story.

The empress of China is rouged every morning regularly after breakfast until her cheeks flame delicately against the creamy composition with which the rest of her face has been coated. A huge mirror is then rolled to the couch upon which the source of all power in China reclines. Tai Hsu studies the effects of the labors of her young ladies so critically that it is said to be necessary occasionally to rouge her twice or thrice before the technic of the operation quite realizes the imperial ideal. The monotony is made less tedious by song, the narration of court gossip and not infrequently application of her majesty's rattle cane to sensitive surfaces.

The penciling of the eyebrows and eyelashes has had to be abandoned, if we may trust French sources of information, owing to the growing weakness of the old lady's sight. But the lips continue to be carmined. The slightly stubborn growth of hair on chin and upper lip is dealt with after the fashion of those Western artists who obliterate black eyes by the application of heavy paint. A wig of extreme lightness, notwithstanding the suggestion of weight conveyed by its crown of black hair, parted centrally, is adjusted to the granum. The false teeth are nicely established in the appropriate place, one of the most trying achievements of the whole toilet, evidently, as the chronic swelling of her majesty's lower jaw is rumored to be due to some painful experience with artificial dentition.

No attack of illness could be too severe to justify the slightest omission of comical detail by the several ladies concerned with the empress dowager's toilet. Though Tai Hsu be so ill that her day must be spent in bed, she is rouged, penciled and massaged on the flat of her back. She emerges from her toilet; we are confidently informed by the French daily just referred to, looking "perfectly natural."

Her appearance, even in the severe stage of the recent paralytic spell, was that of the "blooming matron" in "an autumnal glory of exuberant womanhood." Our contemporary admits that to a critical Western eye the complexion of Tai Hsu would seem "greenish." But that coloration renders a feminine outline all the more seductive to the Manchurian eye. Tai Hsu being Manchurian herself to the time of her extremely long finger nails.

Her majesty wears peculiarly contrived gloves in bed, not as has been inferred, for the beautification of her supple, delicate hands, but for the preservation of that unparalleled length to which her finger nails have attained. The nails will break at times, the phenomenon portending, in her majesty's opinion, a calamity to the country.

By the time the last dash of carmine in the Cupid's bow of her majesty's upper lip has been made appropriate to the charm of woman at 40, the snatches have begun to admit the throngs into the hall of audience. They comprise usually the privileged ones of the court of Peking—a victory or two in favor, support of the four candidates for the post of heir apparent and some member of the diplomatic corps bearing a personal message from his sovereign. The progress of the imperial toilet is bulletined by the eunuchs. The fate of a decree abolishing the opium trade or the promulgation of an edict for which a whole province is sighing may depend upon the skill of the young lady with the rouge brush. Once the wig is adjusted and the empress has passed into the hall of audience—not to be confused with the grand apartment in which the diplomatic corps is officially welcomed—the serious business of Tai Hsu's day commences. It may be summed up in the word "vision." No eunuch has the aged woman become in the art to watch her life has been given that it is a saying in some parts of Peking that she has come to live, but is evading death. Current Literature.

Moaning Pink and Velvet

Take a bare ironing board, or even the feet from an extension table if you do not mind scorching the under side. Put side by side on this board two of the kitchen stove lids; they must be hot as an iron for ironing, or even hotter. Upon these lids lay several thicknesses of cotton cloth which you have previously wrung out in cold water. Have the cloth quite wet, but not enough to drip. Lay the plush lightly over it (nap side up, of course), and if necessary brush gently with a bristle hat brush. Move your material quickly along. The nap, if there is any left, will stand up like magic. The plush if damp when finished can be thrown over the back of a chair near the stove until dry. Renew your lids and wet the cloth as often as needed to insure a good volume of steam. Breadths of velvet dresses can be beautifully restored in this way, and as the goods only lie lightly on the lids an impression of their shape is left, and the work is fully equal to that of a professional.
