It is obligatory that the wedding bouquet shall be of white roses and orchids, with the traditional orange blossoms, and it must be framed with myrtle leaves. It is not necessarily expensive, but of course a man may go as far as he likes in the decoration of the church.

In this item it is doubtful if European extravagance comes anywhere near that of fashionable American marriages. There was a mar riage in Marseilles in 1897, though which made a record.

It was in the height of the bicycle craze and bridegroom and bride and all their attendants rode to and from the church on wheels completely hidden with flowers. The whole show cost $2,500.
