National Theater.
At the National all next week starting with Monday matinee, Chas. E. Blaney, the well known manager and author, saw several years ago the great possibility of a story of the far West to be produced upon the stage, but like all of his enterprises, he gave it careful consideration. "A Child of the Regiment" is the conception and will serve to introduce another new star from Mr. Blaney's brain, Miss Vivian Prescott, whom theatre-goers will remember for her pleasing work last season. Mr. Blaney is very enthusiastic over Miss Prescott, and Walter Wilson at National Theatre thinks he has a worthy successor to Lotta and the late Annie Pixley. The story of the piece is centered around the young lady's home, and is an actual occurrence, in her younger life when she was virtually adopted by the cavalry boys at Fort Prescott, and as she herself says, there was no greater tyrant in the world than little Major, the name she was known by throughout the Fort. The company is a large one, consisting of over twenty acting people and a company of genuine cowboys.
