Ad Multos Annos.

On Sunday Rev. Bernard J. McQuaid will have served forty years as bishop of the diocese of Rochester. In point of fact, he is the first and only bishop that the diocese has had since its creation in 1868. Not many dioceses have been served so long by one bishop. Not often is it vouchsafed to a bishop to remain so long over his flock.

And not only is the bishop to be congratulated upon this anniversary but the diocese as well is to be complimented upon its bishop. Rochester is not the largest diocese in the country either in point of territory or in point of Catholic population. Probably a score exceed it in both respects. But not one in the United States, if in the world so pass it in point of generous and devoted Catholic people. Few dioceses in the world are so well equipped with churches, hospitals, theological seminaries, homes for the aged and in Catholic schools.

Go where one will in the city of Rochester he meets the cross towering above a Catholic church. If it is not a church, then it is a parochial school, an orphan asylum, a hospital, the cemetery, a convent or a seminary.

All these have been built, in great part, since Dr. McQuaid came here as the first bishop of the new see of Rochester on July 12, 1868. This work has been accomplished, not by munificent donations from individual wealthy Catholics but by the widows' mites, the contributions of the comparatively poor Catholics who responded generously to the appeals of our right reverend bishop for aid in achieving the aims he had in mind.

Seeing how difficult it was to obtain the right material for the priesthood in this western land, Bishop McQuaid resolved, when opportunity offered, to establish a seminary where students for the priesthood might be educated under the watchful eye of the bishop and the people. When he broadened the project to his priests, many of them tried to discourage it. The field was too limited, they urged. Practically the same remonstrance was urged by his brother bishops. This opposition did not deter Bishop McQuaid from starting upon the work. An annual seminary collection was decided upon to raise funds. At first the response was not generous but as the people began to understand what was in the mind of their bishop they gave more freely until to-day many thousands of dollars are received annually as the net result of the dollars donated by the ordinary workday Catholics of the diocese. The seminaries—for there are two—one for the preparatory students, the other for those who have been selected to finish their theological studies—are in such great demand that every available inch of room has been pre-empted for a year ahead by the bishops all over the country who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity to have their future priests educated under the direction of the "Father of Catholic Education."

Few dioceses in the United States, even to our far-off insular possessions, but are now enjoying the influence of St. Bernard's spirit, as priests from these sections have been and are being educated in Rochester's famed Catholic seminary. Over in Rome its fame has penetrated and the Vatican has conferred upon its faculty the power of conferring degrees in theology and philosophy, a privilege not often granted to diocesan seminaries.

Ever many years have passed, every parish in the diocese will be presided over by a priest educated in our own seminary. This cannot but result in benefit to both diocese, people and priests and the church at large.
