Carroll O'Donoghue

A Tale of Irish Struggles of 1886 and Recent Times

By CHRISTINE FABER

CHAPTER XXXV

"I do," was Tighe's answer, "I will never betray who gave you this information."

"Betray! I'd sooner tear my tongue out than be the roots!"

Rick was satisfied, and with a brief adieu he departed. Tighe hurriedly sought Garfield.

"Misther Garfield, you gev me permission to luk upon you as a thrue frind; didn't you?"

"Certainly, Mr. Carmody, why do you ask?"

"Bekaise I've come to put yer frindship to the trial. You done a great favor for me once, an' I'm about to ax another of the same kind now. Can you, by any manes, at all, manage to shuggle or stale me into the jail yard to-nought, so that I'll be there the toime the clock strones twelve? moind you, it's no release o' a prisoner I'm plottin'; it's only a little innocent business o' me own. Will you do that for me, Mr. Garfield?"

"The quartermaster paused. 'Well, Mr. Carmody, he answered at length. 'I think I can arrange it for you. You might go on a friendly visit this evening to Ned Sutton, the warden, the same who managed the business before, when that secret visit was paid to the prisoner, O'Donoghue, and he could hide you somewhere in the vicinity of the yard till the hour appointed.'"

Tighe could scarcely find words to express his gratitude; in his extreme ardor he would have made some promise in the name of the Widow Moore, but fear of saying something too wide of the mark, or too foolish to bear a semblance of truth, checked him.

Chapter XXXV

Carter Foiled.

"It's a foine garmint intirely!" The compliment was addressed to Captain Dennier's cloak, and it came from the lips of Tighe's ally, Vohr. He took it down from its place on a temporary rack, shook out its ample folds, incased his own person within it, and strode about the room with evident pleasure. It was large enough to cover Tighe's whole person, the officer being a much taller man, and Tighe a Vohr folded it about him with intense satisfaction. The material was black cloth, but it was hardly as heavy as its somber look would seem to imply, and Tighe was all the better pleased that it was entirely devoid of decoration. He took it off at last, and gave it fresh, critical inspection, the result of the latter being announced in a low-toned soliloquy:

"Somehow, it's a very dun-color, an' I think it's spotted in various places"—though at the same time, to Tighe's disappointment, his eyes were telling him that the cloak was as black and as free from stains as it could well be. "Yes," he continued,

"and the properties after his per- The removing his hat he formed at an excellent cover for the upper part of his face. These arrangements were satisfactory, com- ing against a part of the wall where the shadows lay deep and still, so not to be discovered. He took the stone and watched what he could be continued.

A notable and promising event has recently happened in Ireland. The Benedictines, who have not been there since the reign of Henry VIII, have returned to the great joy of the people.

Twelve hundred Greek schismatics of the parish of Es Salt in Palestine have applied to the Patriarch of Antioch to be received into the Catholic Church.

Daniel O'Connell's piano is still in excellent preservation and in daily use for teaching and practicing in the Presentation Convent, Cahiroiveen, Ireland.

The fifty-third convention of the Catholic Central Verein of America will be held this year in Cleveland, O., on September 20, 21, 22 and 23.

A cablegram announces the death of the Right Rev. J. Leonard D.D., vicar apostolic of the Cape of Good Hope, Western district. He was consecrated in 1872 and was held in high esteem by people in South Africa.

The average annual exodus from Ireland during the last ten years has been 37,746, or roughly the nearly 400,000 of the decade— jail officials. By the time that the clock was on the stroke of half millions.

More than 2000 people witnessed the unveiling and blessing of five statues—Our Lady of Lourdes and the four evangelists—recently at the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Waterbury, Conn. The statues are of bronze heavily covered with pure gold.

La Verite of Quebec says that Catholics of French descent are increasing in Canada everywhere and decreasing nowhere, while those of English descent are decreasing in Ontario, and the Maritime Provinces.

Like those of Germany and the United States, the commerce and industry of Spain, in the last four years has grown by leaps and bounds. Spain has taken on new life; she is abreast of all other countries.

Recently Bishop Cusack administered confirmation to a class of 130 at the Church of St. Benedict the Moor, New York. Half the class was made up of men and women who were recently baptized into the church.

"You'll never betray who gave you this information?"

Around the Globe

Catholic News From Many Places.

At the seventeenth national pilgrimage to Lourdes, held from Aug. 17 to 24.

The Duchess Marchioness of Bate has decided to complete the restoration of the Greyfriar's Church at Elgin, England, which her husband, the late Marquis, had in hand prior to his death.

A young man named Cassidy, while breaking stones on the road between Shrule and Dalgan, recently came upon a most peculiar article embedded, fossilized in a limestone rock. In appearance it would remind one of an infernal machine—wires, springs, screws, and what looked suspiciously like dynamite caps in a semi-fossilized state.

Very Rev. Philip Callery, P.P., Tullamore, presided at a meeting of the ladies of the district held in connection with the tuberculosis exhibition, which was opened in the town on June 11, and a letter was read from Lady Aberdeen. The members of the Mullingar Teachers' Association have passed a resolution thanking the clergy for giving the teachers a free day to attend the tuberculosis exhibition in Mullingar, and also thanking Very Rev. Fr. Daly, Adm. for his action towards the teachers' representatives.

Justice Fitzgerald sat in the County Courthouse, Kilkenny, on June 2, and took up the hearing of the appeals from Sub-Commission and Civil Bill Courts from the County Kilkenny.
