The head of the fire department of Rouen, France, has suggested to the Mayor a novel project in the fire extinguishing service.

Inasmuch as the city is traversed everywhere by the electric street car wires it is suggested that there should be provided pumps, driven by dynamo to take current by means of trolley hooks attached to the street car wires at the nearest point to the fire.

The advantages are seen at a glance. The power is unlimited, the motor strength on a 500-volt circuit could do anything with a stream of water. No engines would have to be kept going and the machinery would be smaller than the great mass of metal that has to be dragged to the scene of a fire.

Weird Wedding Dress. Members of the M'Jiji tribe, who live on the Limpopo river, in Africa, wear an extraordinary marriage dress. This weird and uncomfortable looking costume is made entirely of split reeds, fastened together with grass, and the unhappy bachelor who contemplates matrimony is compelled to wear it for three solid months before the happy event takes place, meanwhile leading a life of strict seclusion.

Don't Want Lemons. It seems to be a solemn fact that a certain popular expression is hurting the lemon trade. Whereas there was formerly no more hesitation about asking for a lemon than for any other kind of fruit people acquainted with the vernacular now pass on and buy some other variety. At least so say some of the dealers.

Association of Belgian and Holland Priests

Last week Wednesday the Belgian and Holland priests met in convention at Chicago, for the purpose of furthering the spiritual interests of their countrymen scattered throughout the United States.
