The Thought Foremost in the Minds of All

Prospective Piano Purchasers

As the Holiday Season Approaches, What Kind of a

PIANO IS BEST TO BUY

As a lifetime purchase, without making a mistake. To make the selection easier we herewith append a partial list of our large line of pianos, with a few of their special points and superior qualities added.

- | | |
|--|--|
| Iserson & Hamlin - $800
"The Stradivarius of pianos."
Is one of the oldest and without doubt the finest piano in the market to-day. Such musical celebrities as Walter Damrosch, Harold Bauer, Katherine Goddard, Arthur Nikisch, etc., have given it their heartiest endorsement. | Sohmer - $550
"Sold for over thirty years in Rochester."
Established 1872. A house of national reputation and rank. It is one of the best sellers among the absolutely standard pianos, and the name Sohmer stands for individuality of tone and superior workmanship. |
| Hardmann - $525
"The only piano that improves with use."
A piano that is especially good for accompanying, and is endorsed by Caruso, Campanini, Trazzini and others. | Behning - $500
"The sweetest tone piano made."
The Behning piano enjoys an enviable reputation among lovers of a real sweet toned house piano. |
| Kurtzmann - $400
"Made for over half a century."
Sold in Rochester over 22 years, and is a superior buying proposition. They run back sixty years without a single change in quality. | Fischer - $450
"Oldest firm in the piano history."
Almost 70 years making pianos, and that means they have superior reputation to carry on. |
| Chapman - $425
"The Musician's choice."
A piano made to wear a lifetime and embodying everything that the most critical could desire. | Kohler & Campbell - $300
"You pay for nothing but tone and construction."
This firm is one of the most enterprising in existence and they present a very tempting proposition. |

We also have several of the above Pianos, slightly used, at

FROM SCIENCE CLASS

It is the Most Common Thing About Animals.

A drop of the blood of a walrus shows no relation with a drop of whale's blood, or of the blood of any other cetacean, such as seals or porpoises, which, like the walrus, are mammals that have taken to the sea.

Instead of that, the blood of the walrus immediately reacts with the blood of horses, cows and calves, thus proving that he is an equine that no longer grows grass but goes where he can live on an exclusively fish diet. Likewise the hippopotamus is shown to be a modified pig. Where a blood relationship exists, but is distant, these reactions are proportionately faint, but where no reactions occur there is no relationship at all. Thus, geology indicated that birds are descended from reptiles, and, oddly enough, the blood of a bird shows a distinct, though very faint reaction with the blood of a snake but none whatever with that of the scorpion or the frog, turtle, or other reptiles.

On the other hand, the kangaroo, once such a great family, but now reduced to the kangaroo, the opossum and a small creature in South America, have now not a single blood relation left. As to man, he has no relationship to monkeys but the blood of anthropoid apes shows a very faint reaction with his. Sometimes, all the species of man are unmistakably of one blood, whatever their color or shade.

Hence the blood is by far the most hereditary thing about us. Whether the shape of the skeleton, the contour of the body, the brain, heart, lungs, stomach, intestines, liver or skin, or even ancestral habits about the great Food Question—Darwin's only Creator—how to eat or keep from being eaten—are comparable to a single drop of blood for telling the correct story of descent. All this gives a new meaning to the words: "For the blood thereof is the life thereof." Likewise, the old saying that insanity runs in the blood now wears a scientific look, since blood in a family are inseparably associated.

Average Age of Birds

The doctrine of vegetarianism appears to be slightly shaken by the result of an investigation that a New York newspaper has made into the subject of the longevity of birds. With one notable exception the meat-eating birds are the longer lived. The exception is the swan.

The average ages of some of the best known birds are given in the following table:

Blackbird	15
Blackcap	15
Chimney Swift	15
Crow	100
Crow	100
Few, common	10
Goldfinch	15
Goose	50
Heron	50
Lark	15
Linn	25
Nighthawk	15
Parrot live	60
Partridge	15
Peewee	25
Pheasant	15
Pigeon	30
Raven	100
Robin	15
Sparrow Hawk	40
Swan	100
Thrush	15
Wren	15

The average age of the boarding house variety of chicken is still undetermined.

Talks Easy

"What makes this vegetable soup taste so different?" asked the young husband.
"Only the leaks you sent home," replied the bride. "You remember you said you were going to order leaks?"
"I didn't order any leaks," growled the husband, but he finished his bowl of soup rather than disappoint her.
That afternoon he stopped at the grocery store.
"How did you come to send leaks to my house this morning?" he demanded. "I didn't order them."
"O, for land's sake. They were Mrs. Jackson's tulip bulbs. She left them on the counter and they got into your basket by mistake." Detroit Free Press.

Cry Baby Cure

Alaska babies do not cry. They try it and then give up the bad habit from choice. To this desirable end they are gently persuaded by their mothers. When a baby begins to cry the mother takes a bit of water, lifts her mouth with the liquid and squirts it into the face of the weeping infant. If the cry increases in force, so does the stream of water. No words spoken, no blow is struck, but the victory is sure. Very soon the infant begins to connect weeping with the squirting of water in its face. Becoming firmly convinced that the two things are inseparable, it decides to cry no more.

Chinese Coolies Smuggled

Smuggling Chinese coolies from Mexico into the United States is a busy industry on the border and a profitable one, but occasionally there is a setback. The other day one of the smugglers was caught as he was leaving San Diego harbor at night.

SMITH I KNOW

A Reading Schedule in the Museum.

I was certainly nervous and soiled, especially when they looked at my name, and I saw they were all young, with a question mark on their faces. They were led by a kindly old man who sprang upon a large rock, pulled out the air whistle and looked at his watch.

I was in a quandary. I had a beautiful model of a man's face, which I had brought with me, and I was sure I could not make a running start afterward at that distance. I decided to wait and was rewarded by seeing the leader or spring down and come directly toward me at a trot, followed by the rest of the pack. My heart nearly jumped into my throat as I shifted the rifle from the rack and waited for the time to fire. Fear and anxiety they came gradually abstracting their pace to a walk. They were my time; and just as I shifted my rifle toward them a puff of wind whirled the most of the Indians below to the leader, who sprang back and air as thought shot and started out at a gallop. My first shot, fired hastily, killed the first runner, who disappeared in the thick brush before I could even aim the rifle shell. I sprang up and rushed around the place to where the other sheep stretched below me just in time to see the hand step 250 yards distant and look back before they plunged into the gash below. My last chance had gone. Standing myself as best I could, I held the rifle head on the shoulder of the leader and pressed the trigger. Instantly the sheep disappeared completely as if the earth had opened up and swallowed them. Half dead by the suddenness of it all I ran forward to the ledge, half blinded by the wind in my face, and there lay the grand old leader on his side, his eyes already glazed with death. His magnificent horns, fourteen and seven inches and more than a full ounce, making me realize my loss of the finest trophy my country has ever sent me over, and I was satisfied.

Over Pan

"This is not for," said the farmer. "We use it for nothing. It is for being out for market, but, you know, calves, cows, chickens, pigs, any animal that wears a tail, is suitable in the far north. The hair is rolled up with other things in an imitation skin. It is a good one, I believe, in rope making, for the wool and the spinning yarn. For that, properly treated, it is a very handsome thing. But when it is employed in certain styles of pairs, and they also serve to cover the thumb of sheep gloves. A good thing about the fur business is that the fur must be taken in the fall of winter; the trapped must be under the coolest climate conditions; only then is the fur at its best. The greater, at the other end, the could work best in cold weather, must do all his work in the heat of summer, or otherwise he might not be able to keep up with the changing fashions."

India's Freedom Month

It is estimated that $1,500,000,000 in gold, and perhaps as much in silver, is hidden away in the Indian stockpiles. Van quantities of the precious metals are known to be kept in the form of personal possessions. From the time of the British conquest, a reservoir into which the proceeds of the mines have been poured for centuries of the globe, only to disappear from statistics. Could the wealth be drawn upon, the effect on the industrial and commercial life of the country would be very great. It is, therefore, a matter of great interest to try to turn India's dormant wealth to active use. It may be impossible at first. The British have views everything to a very great extent, and it is not probable that only a little of the combined wealth of India were vitiated, a few coins might be given to the condition of life in England's great eastern empire.

Retributive Justice

A case of retributive justice, as far as it goes, is reported from Paris. An attendant at the Asinai Hospital, where physiological investigations are being made, discovered that a mouse rabbit had been stolen from their tables. The loss of the rabbits themselves was not a source of trouble to the authorities, but the fact that they had been inoculated with various germs has had a disturbing effect. It is known that the rabbits had all been inoculated and several of them were infectious or probably so. The authorities are in warning the thieves of the dangerous nature of their work, but none were returned.

A King's Grave Opened

King Edward I. of England died July 7, 1307, and 200 years later the British Society of Antiquaries opened his tomb in order to find out if he really had been buried in war, as the legend ran. The chronicles of the time remarks: "To their great astonishment they found the royal corpse to appear as represented by the historian." Although the king appeared bare, the face and hands seemed perfectly alive. The king was found to be a foot 2 inches in length, thus fully justifying his name.
